A variety of field and crop conditions across Pennsylvania and surrounding states have made production figures hard to assess. Late rains have helped third cutting hay in some areas. But the corn and bean crops have been greatly reduced from the summer drought. HARRSIBURG (Dauphin Co.) — U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan recently announced that 60 counties in Pennsylvania are to be eligible to receive disaster assistance because of the drought.

Pennsylvania has 67 counties, not all of which are strongly agricultural. The extreme south eastern counties apparantly were not struck by the devastation which has hurt many others in trying to grow crops for livestock and humans.

Although there were 41 counties whose county USDA Agricultural

PHILLIPSBURG, NJ — The fairgrounds of Warren County hosted dairy farmers from all over the state last week for the annual Black and White Show.

Wayne Sliker, St. Paris, Ohio, displayed calm determination while making choices during judging the 176 entries.

Ribbons were awarded for the first 10 places in the female classes. A breeder's rosette was awarded to the exhibitor of the highest placing animal bred and shown by that exhibitor in each class. First- and second-place ribbons were given for the best uddered animals in milking classes.

The show ended with the grand and senior champion female in the junior division: Kerken-Day Wisemand Lemmon owned by John Kerkendall.

Lazarus Prominent At Allentown Show

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — In terms of sheer numbers of hogs, the Allentown Fair has a huge show. But of the 258 total number of placings at Wednesday's show, the name Lazarus was prominent.

Grant Lazarus won supreme champion boar with his Feb. 1991 300-pound Landrace. Champion Chester White gilt in the open class went to Scott Lazarus. Champion Boar in the Duroc went to Calvin Lazarus and Sons, as well as the champion gilt. The champion boar in the Spotted Poland breed went to Lester Lazarus brothers and the champion gilt went to Benjamin Lazarus.

"The boar carries with him a lot of flexibility that can generate pigs," said Roger Bankert, a swine

August 27, 1991

The market tone was unsettled as a difference of opinion existed between buyers and sellers. Processors attempted to get more for their finished product, but competitive pricing forced a lowering of desired values in some instances. Raw materials were usually sufficient for current needs. Floor stocks were adequate to fully adequate.

OPINION

This Must Not Happen

We have been made aware of an important issue which has the potential of negatively affecting our 4-H and FFA youth programs across all states. The issue is the use of unapproved or illegal drugs administered to 4-H/FFA project animals. The illegal use of unapproved and potentially dangerous drugs poses potential health hazards, sets poor examples for youth involved in the exhibition of livestock, reduces public confidence in the livestock industry, and places the participants in violation of show regulations and state and federal law.

The veterinary newsletter from the University of Maryland reported that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) ask the university to pay particular attention to the possible use of a drug called clenbuterol in beef, sheep and swine. Clenbuterol is one of a group of drugs called "beta agonists" and acts to increase muscle deposition at the expense of fat in animals. This drug is not allowed in the United States and has no approved use in food producing animals. Clenbuterol is an extremely dangerous drug in that humans consuming meat from an animal which has received clenbuterol can be subjected to a severe and life-threatening reaction.

The food safety issue is of particular importance because it is agriculture's responsibility to help insure the production of safe and wholesome food products for the consumer. The clenbuterol issue goes beyond that of food safety in light of the fact that we are dealing with an illegal drug substance. FDA has stated their intention to use the full authority and resources available to them to investigate and prosecute individuals who illegally import, distribute, sell or use clenbuterol.

In addition to clenbuterol, other drugs have been mentioned as finding misuse in 4-H/FFA project animals. These include sedatives, tranquilizers, diuretics, and non-steroidal anti-inflammatories. Most of these drugs are not approved for use in food-producing animals. The others are restricted by law to use by or on the order of a licensed veterinarian. A new code of 4-H/FFA ethics was developed and implemented in Maryland this year. This code addresses the issue of illegal drug use in show animals. Only the highest of ethical standards across all youth programs should be used in every state.

If this is happening in ag youth program, you should be reminded of the responsibility to producing safe and wholesome food products. The indiscriminate use of animal drugs by a few exhibitors has the potential of jeopardizing the credibility and image of the entire livestock industry. This must not happen.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Plan On Attending Northeast Poultry Conference

The first Northeast Poultry and Egg Trade Show and Conference will be held September 25 and 26 at the Lancaster Host Resort.

This is a joint effort of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation and the Northeast United Egg Producers. An excellent two-day educational program has been planned.

There will be separate sessions for broiler, egg and turkey production. Topics to be covered include shuttle programs for coccidiosis, ventilation, composting, bronchitis control, a panel on Salmonella enteritidis, nutrition, and the growing poultry and turkey health problems. There is a registration fee for the educational sessions.

In addition, there will be a free trade show (no addmission charge) from noon to 5 p.m. each day featuring exhibits from companies serving the poultry industry.

This is an excellent conference, and every commercial poultry producer should plan on attending. For more information, contact the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation at (717) 652-7530.

To Consider Using Soybeans As Forage

Drought-stricken soybean plants may be used as a forage crop. Allow plants to mature as much as possible before harvesting.

Some pod or bean development will enhance the feeding value when harvested as either hay or silage. Soybean forages are high in calcium (about 1.3 percent on a DM basis). For this reason, it should be avoided as the major forage for dry cows.

If ensiling, it is important to ensile before plant moisture drops below 60-65 percent. If possible, mix soybeans with other forages, preferably during ensiling, to enhance palatability.

If plants are high in moisture and lack pod or bean development, add 100-200 pounds of ground grain per ton when direct cutting rather than wilting to 60-65 percent moisture.

Stems are not very palatable, and if animals have the opportunity, they will sort them out. Chopping hay and feeding it in a total mixed ration (TMR) will help prevent sorting and stretch forage supplies.

If soybean forage contains substantial amounts of developed beans, reduce the amounts of other fats and oils in the ration or the ration may be too laxative. Soybeans may also be pastured. If cows are removed before all stems are eaten, there may be regrowth.

Pricing Corn Silage

Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent, offers the following method of pricing corn silage.

This method involves looking at the value of other feeds you could use instead of corn silage. Two such feeds might be ear corn and grass hay. One ton of corn silage dry matter has about the same feed value as a half ton of ear corn plus a half ton of grass hay. If a half ton of ear corn is worth $40 a and a half ton of grass hay is worth $40, then their combined value is $80. That would be the value of one ton of corn silage dry matter. Since one ton of 70 percent moist corn silage contains only 30 percent dry matter, the value of this corn silage is only 30 percent of the ear corn and grass hay or $24.

This is a base value to be pricing from. In addition to moisture, this price needs to be adjusted for 1) Silage quality (grain content, length of chop, mold, nitrate levels, etc.); 2) transportation costs; and 3) harvesting costs, if you are buying standing corn.

Farm Forum

Editor:

I have just read P.F.A. Dairy Specialist Mel Eckhaus' remarks on my letter of Aug. 3, 1991 in Lancaster Farming. He says he must clarify a misunderstanding. There is no misunderstanding. He states that in 1988 P.F.A. petitioned the PMMB for a $1.05 over-order premium. Why? It was because P.F.A., Farm Bureau and some others had backed a $1.00 per hundred raise in the Federal support that would have raised many more dollars to Pa dairymen than the $1.05 did.

Secondly, he says that on May 9, 1991 the reason P.F.A. testified to remove the 30¢ so-called oil premium was because oil prices had dropped to pre-war level. He has to be confused on this as our oil prices have not dropped near that amount. And the 5¢ added on for milk hauling for increased fuel cost is still not taken off.

He also adds P.F.A. supplied substantive statistical data to show cost of production had exceeded the farm price of milk, yet P.F.A. helped reduce the milk price by 30¢ per hundred. Mr. Eckhaus says that increasing production was driving prices down, yet according to ag statistic's, cow numbers and production is dropping compared to 1990. When comparing 1990 months to 1991.

And yet we must remember

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHO IS CHOSEN?

September 1, 1991

Background Scripture: Acts 7:54 through 8:3, 9:1-22.

Devotional Reading: Acts 22:3-6.

This is a story about God's call to a person and his response. The person called is Saul of Tarsus, soon to be Paul the Apostle. The purpose of the writer of Luke-Acts is to help us understand how Saul the persecutor became Paul the Apostle. All of us probably know well this story: Saul, intent on persecuting the Christians in Damascus, has a paranormal experience with God on the road, is struck blind, is subsequently healed of his blindness in Damascus, and takes up God's challenge to become an apostle.

TO CARRY MY NAME

Paul, of course, is the star of the story. God wants him, not only to cease persecuting the followers of Christ, but, even more important, to do something for him. As God tells Ananias, "...he is a chosen instrument of mine to carry my name before the Gentiles and kings and the sons of Israel. . . " (Acts 9:15).

As I've already indicated, God called and Saul responded to that call, but there was more to it than that. In order to make his call to Saul, God needed to use some other people, too. One person whom God used — who obviously did not know he was being used — was the High Priest who acceded to Saul's request for letters to the Damascus synagogues permitting Saul to take them into custody. His response to Saul helped to send him on the road to Damascus — and ultimately his encounter with the Lord.

More apparent is Annanias, whom God chose to heal Saul of his blindness. Here is a man who reacted to God's call in much the way we would have reacted: "Lord, I have heard from many about this man, how much evil he has done. . . " (22:13). I'd like to help, Lord, but surely you don't mean for me to get involved with this man!?

ANOTHER JUDAS

Another person who played a role in Saul's conversion is Judas (not Iscariot), Saul's host in Jerusalem. And finally "for several days he was with the disciples at Damascus" (19b). I'm sure they were very nervous about the newly-converted Saul, but their obedience to God was stronger than their anxiety.

Who was chosen in this incident? Every one of these people was chosen to play a role. That leaves just one more person who is chosen by God: You!

You'll Get Consistent, Risk-Free Performance From New Funk's G® Brand Hybrids

4393 105 Days | 4472 110 Days | 4530 113 Days | 4624 118 Days

New Funk's G brand hybrids deliver consistent performance even under the stress of heat, drought, marginal soils or disease pressures. So you'll get virtually risk-free performance in good years — and in bad years.

Backed by CIBA-GEIGY research

You see, these hybrids are backed by nine years of CIBA-GEIGY Seed Division research. With local testing in growing conditions just like yours. That kind of research produces hybrids capable of standing up to anything mother nature has to offer. Hybrids that maximize your profit potential, while minimizing your risks.

Get complete performance

Plus, you get performance across the board. With big yields. But with 95% or better standability... 25% or less moisture... and intactness ratings under four. And you get all that in the maturity groups you need to spread your risks even more.

Limit your risks

Get risk-free performance on your farm today by calling Hoffman Seeds, Inc. You'll enjoy the peace of mind that comes from planting these new Funk's G brand hybrids.

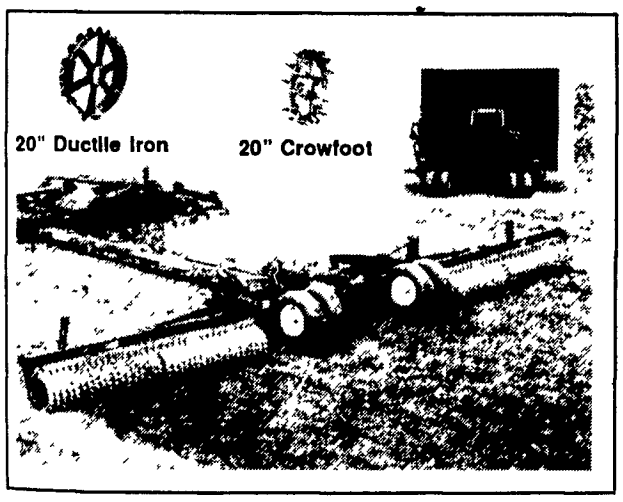
Good Soil Management Starts With Brillion



X-Fold Pulverizers 19'-46' Lengths

The pulverizer has been a basic tool for nearly 100 years and Brillion has been building them since 1895. Look at these features:

• Automatic Transport Lock • Telescoping Drawbar (XL & XXL only) • Hitch Adjustment • Cost Efficient-Energy Savings • Floating Wings • Narrow Transport Width •

Hitch Adjustment

Another outstanding feature of BRILLION'S X-Fold Pulverizers is the Hitch Adjustment. The pulverizer drawbar can pivot vertically in field position. Three thicknesses of shims are provided on the braces on each side of the drawbar (1/8", 1/4" & 1/2"). These shims are used to limit soil pushing in front of the rollers.

Farm Groups Plan Dairy Rally in Troy

TROY (Bradford Co.)—Several farm organizations here will be holding a dairy farmer support rally on Thursday morning September 5 at the Troy Fair Grounds. The event will be held rain or shine begining at 11:00 a.m.

North Penn Milk Co-operative; Northern Tier Milk Co-operative; Scenic Mountain Co-operative; and the Progressive Agriculture Organization are supporting the rally.

Arden Tewksbury, manager of Pro Ag, said the rally is being held to give dairy farmers one more chance to meet with national and state officials before the US Congress reconviens on September 10. "We are asking dairy farmers to bring any information with them that will document the hardships that are being experienced," Tewksbury said. "I feel many dairy farmers have given up and we want to regain the same momentum that we had during the past spring."

Roy Watson, manager, North Penn, said that all of the organizations were working with state senator Roger Madigan in an attempt to

New Ultra:Lac 22. When the temperature climbs over 80°F in the shade, a cow's milk production and your profits can head in the other direction. Nothing robs a cow of her ability to make milk like the draining effects of heat stress, especially in early lactation. And your top producers can be affected the most.

Ultra:Lac 22 combines the unique benefits of MEGALAC® rumen bypass fat with a specialized blend of proteins, vitamins, minerals, sodium bicarbonate, Dairyman's Edge, even flavor enhancers, to help battle heat stress.

By increasing a cow's dry matter intake, stabilizing rumen fermentation, and decreasing electrolyte imbalances due to fluid loss, Ultra:Lac 22 can help cows beat the heat. And because it's an enriched "package" of top-dress feed supplements, you can feed it to the cows that need it most—when they need it most.

To find out how Ultra:Lac 22 can help your herd handle heat stress, contact your Agway Farm Enterprise salesperson today.

Hoof To Rail Hog Competition

hog competitions yet put together for educating youth about the start-to-finish aspects of raising market swine.

The program, developed by Kenneth Winebark, Lebanon County extension agent, Chester Hughes, Lancaster County agent, and other extension agents and 4-H leaders throughout the south eastern region of the state, provides a competition that scores the youths' project animals on rate of gain, amount of lean gain, on-foot judging and finally carcass evaluation.

According to Winebark, the idea of the competition was that real-business standards should be applied in educating youth about what is important in raising hogs for market. The majority of market hog evaluations have been based on weight of animal and live judging.

After talking it over with other extension agents and getting support from within the Penn State University system and the agricultural industry, the program was given its pilot test this year.

With the support of 15 business sponsors who put up the prize money for the derby, 32 youth entered the program in May by weighing in a feeder pig, either purchased or home bred, raised it during the summer and then gathered together twice for an on-foot judging and then last Saturday for a carcass evaluation.

The final scoring was based on a formula used by the National Pork Producers Council to determine overall gain of lean meat on the animal.

The results of the competition were released this week. Krall's winning entry rated a .872, which was 59 points above the reserve champion entered by Kara Arnold, of Lebanon.

Entries from Lebanon County took the top six spots and, to further reinforce the importance of depending on genetic lines and proper care to raise top level market animals, the results of the competition showed that littermates took the first, third and fifth placings in the competition.

Krall's hog weighed in on May 4 at 30 pounds. At weigh-off, on August 21, her animal weighed 248 pounds and was judged champion of the on-foot evaluation gaining a rating of four, on a scale of one to five.

The carcass weight of the hog was 174 pounds with only ¾ -inch of rib fat and a loin eye of 7.35 inches. The length was 32.10 inches.

Krall's hog was third in rate of gain, growing at an average of 2.06 pounds a day. Jason Krall, her brother, raised the fastest growing hog, a littermate to his sister's overall champion. His hog grew at a rate of 2.16 pounds per day, to be champion in that competitive catagory.

The second fastest growing hog was Kara Arnold's hog which scored second overall to Stacy's entry. Arnold's entry had a rate of gain at 2.08 pounds per day. It was not a littermate of the Krall entries.

Brian Kreider's entry was fourth and Roxanne Kirst's littermate to Krall's winner was fifth. Dan Atkins' entry took sixth.

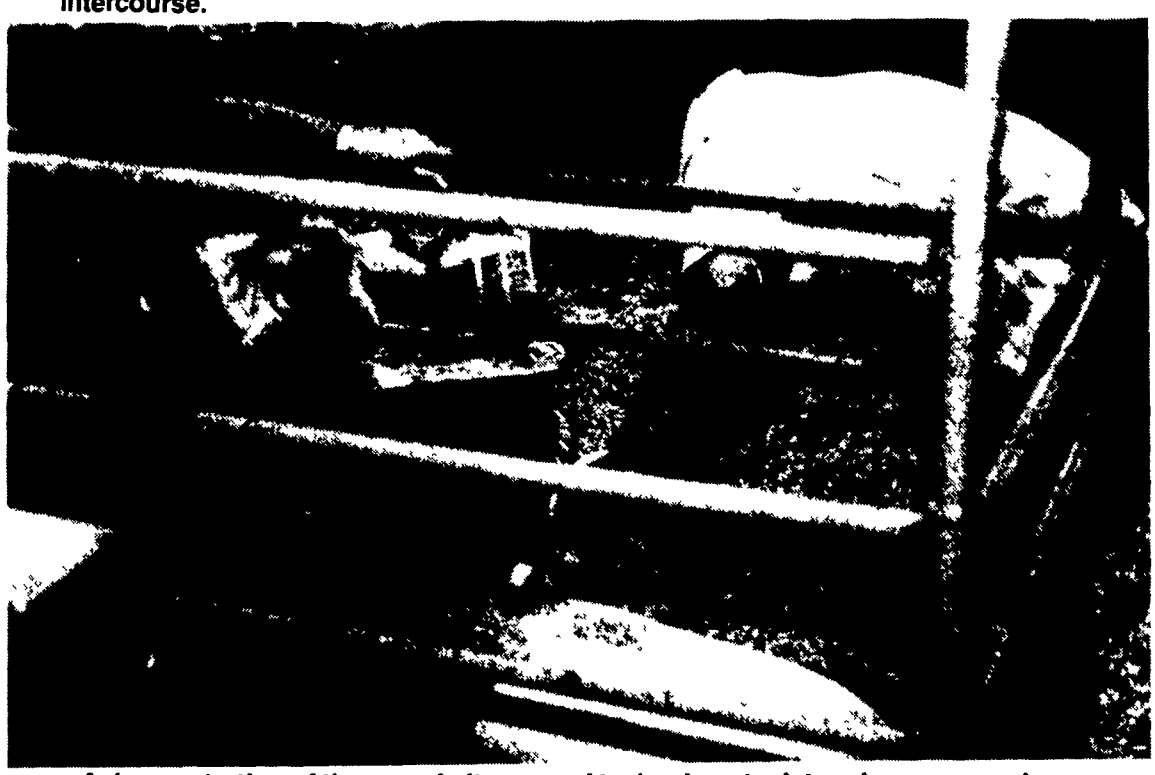
Lisa Pfautz, of Lancaster County, had a seventh place finished, followed by David Howe of Chester County, Cory Pfautz of Lancaster, and Matt Howe of Chester.

Jamie Risser, of Lebanon, took home the title of reserve champion carcass animal, even though his hog finished in with a ranking at 21st. His 215-pound live-weight entry butchered out to a 148-pound carcass with only .60-inch of fat. It was determined to be 58.2 percent lean, while Krall's first place lean gain was 59.6 percent lean.

Stacy Krall kneels behind her grand champion on-foot hog which later became overall grand champion after carcass evaluation.

Jason Krall kneels behind his entry, the champion in daily gain and which took third place overall. His hog was a littermate to his sister's overall grand champion.

Dr. Ed Mills, a Penn State meat scientist, talks about the specifics of carcass and meat evaluation to a group of 60 4-H youth and adults at Stoltzfus Bros. Meats in Intercourse.



A demonstration of the use of ultra-sound technology to determine carcass structure on a live market hog is provided during on-foot evaluations. Holding the hog is Lancaster County 4-H leader Marlin Becker, while Dr. Mike Miller, director of ProGenetics with White Oak Mills, applies the ultra-sound transmitter to the side of a hog.

Kara Arnold's reserve champion was highest for rate of gain.

This cut shows the quality of carcass from Matt Howe's entry which won reserve champion on-foot.

To compare how well the live placings related to final rankings — even though Krall's hog placed first in both catagories — the champion medium weight hog in the live judging ranked sixth overall, while the champion lightweight hog in live judging, shown by Melissa Becker, of Lancaster County, finished 24th overall.

Kara Arnold's overall second place finishing hog was champion in the daily gain, had the heaviest carcass at 211 pounds, the second largest loin eye, was in a three-way tie for longest with a length of 33 inches and had live score of 3.

Winebark said that what the program shows is that merely determining one aspect of the hog — live judging, for example — for final evaluation is not an accurate representation of what kind of offering the hog is going to make in the market place.

"What we wanted to provide the kids with was a more complete understanding of everything that's taken into consideration in raising animals on a commercial basis," he said.

The program started early in the year, with three people sitting down and discussing how to provide a better education program for their 4-H swine club members. Winebark, Chet Hughes, of Lancaster County, and Marlin Becker, a Lancaster County 4-H leader.

The idea started in Lebanon and Lancaster counties, but Winebark in a letter to agents in the other counties, wrote, "We decided that it might be beneficial if we opened it up to neighboring counties."

The entry fee for the competition was $15 per head, payable at weigh-in. However, the minimum prize money received was $20, through the support of a number of businesses.

Those providing sponsorship of the experimental program were M.H. Eby Inc., Robert Graybill DVM, Keystone Farm Credit, Purina Mills Inc., White Oak Mills, Frank and Julie Feeser, Hatfield

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.)—Thirty-one members of the Lehigh County 4-H Swine Club showed and sold 80 market hogs at their 1991 round-up recently at Quakertown Livestock Market.

The show judge was Roger Bankert, swine breeder from Hanover, York Co. In addition to judging the animals, Bankert also evaluated the 4-H members' fitting and showing skills. He selected the following champions:

- Champion fitter, Stephen Wessner, New Tripoli.
- Reserve champion fitter, Daniel Hartman, Mertztown.
- Champion showman, Mark Lazarus, Germansville.
- Reserve champion showman, Laura Lazarus, Germansville.

The sale's average price was $.76 per pound, with the grand champion selling for $2.80 per pound to Peters Brothers Meats, Lenhartsville. Thirty-two different buyers supported the sale.

The established purpose of the program was to "help evaluate your current management and breeding program from the standpoint of carcass merit, growth and soudness.

Each 4-H member was allowed up to three entries, with a restriction of feeders up to 60 pounds. The animals were slaughtered and buchered by Stoltzfus Bros. Meats, in Intercourse, on a grade and yield basis. There were no slaughter costs.

Also, although the final information is not available on the feeding program, the youth were instructed to keep a record of the amount and types of feeds used. A feed efficiency calculation was required on each animal before final ranking was determined, for the interest of all producers, "particularly in correlating protein levels with growth rates and production of lean pork," according to Winebark.

"I'm very pleased with the response to the program by the kids and the community," Winebark said. "I think providing these kinds of evaluations and programs not only makes 4-H more interesting, but provides our youth with the kind of knowledge they need to compete in the increasingly sophisticated world of agriculture."

Judges for the show were Keith Bryan, of Penn State, Henry Holloway, of Darlington, Md., and Doug Clemmens, of Hatfield Quality Meats.

The carcass evaluation was provided by Dr. Ed Mills, a specialist with Penn State University, who held a sort of classroom discussion of the the evaluation process with the kids.

Although there were no entries from Berks and Schuylkill counties, youth from Lebanon, Lancaster, Chester, York and Dauphin counties did participate.

Winebark said that because of the success of the program, it will continue to be held, with the help of sponsors and supporters, and of course, the youth.

rectify the inequities of the premium structure being adminstered by the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB). Watson said he has told the PMMB that they keep passing a premium in Pennsylvania but the majority of dairy farmers don't receive the premium money.

Watson and Tewksbury recently testified at a milk hearing conducted by the PMMB. Both organization leaders urged the board to grant a special premium on Pennsylvania produced milk as a result of the 1991 drought, but more importantly they urged the board to work with the farm organizations to ammend present milk marketing laws to allow the PMMB to establish premiums on Pennsylvania produced milk that leaves the state.

Several national, state and county officials are expected to attend the rally.

1990 prices were approx. $4.00 per hundredweight higher with nearly the same volume of milk when comparing 1990 to 1991.

Mr. Eckhaus says P.F.A. objective is to produce the highest pay price to dairymen that will fit with the most current market conditions.

Isn't it strange that with the same amount of milk and the same market conditions in 1991 we had in 1990 dairymen are expected to take $4.00 per hundred less for their milk.

Mr. Eckhaus, here are some simple questions, your policy is set by members. 1. What percentage of dairymen are on your dairy policy committee? 2. Why is P.F.A. and Farm Bureau so opposed to any type of supply management? 3. If P.F.A. and Farm Bureau are so opposed to any program that anyone else tries to implement at the national level, why doesn't Farm Bureau propose a program to raises dairymen's prices instead of just opposing all other programs? Why should U.S. Dairy farmers receive less for their milk than Mexico $14.00 # and Canada with their supply control. Isn't it time our farm organizations start working for the dairymen and farmers who pay their wages then worrying about what the politicians will say.

60 Counties Eligible

Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) offices applied for emergency assistance, and which were forwarded to the federal government for consideration, the 60 counties were approved because of shared borders.

In order to receive aid, the crops must first be estimated by ASCS personnel, and the crop plan must be on file at that office.

Those 41 counties which received disaster designation based on in-county conditions included Adams, Armstrong, Bedford, Blair, Bradford, Butler, Cambria, Centre, Clarion, Clearfield, Clinton, Columbia, Crawford, Cumberland, Dauphin, Fayette, Forest, Franklin, Fulton, Greene, Huntingdon, Juniata, Lancaster, Lebanon, Lycoming, McKean, Mifflin, Montour, Perry, Potter, Schuylkill, Snyder, Somerset, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Tioga, Union, Venango, Washington, Wyoming and York counties.

The 19 continguous counties also will receive eligibility. They are Allegheny, Beaver, Berks, Cameron, Carbon, Chester, Elk, Erie, Indiana, Jefferson, Lackawanna, Lehigh, Luzerne, Mercer, Northumberland, Warren, Wayne, and Westmoreland counties.

According to a news release from Donald Unangst, head of the state office of USDA's ASCS, "This action follows detailed analysis by USDA staffs at the county level which led to the recommendation by the federal agricultural state emergency board for disaster status for the affected counties."

According to the analysis by USDA, the hardest hit crops are corn, hay and pasture, soybeans, vegetables and nursery crops.

According to Unangst, the estimated losses exceed $493 million and are expected to increase as crops mature and the damage can be measured.

Farmers in the 60 counties who can show 30 percent of more loss on at least one crop will have eight months to apply for 4.5 percent interest loans through the Farmers Home Administration. However, in addition to normal eligibility requirements, including crop insurance for production or physical loss. .

Farmers in those counties are also eligible for technical assistance by the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) in revising conservation plans, getting advice on increasing water conservation, developing seeding practices for drought tolerant species, developing alternative or supplemental water sources, and in prevent the loss of land due to erosion caused by a drought-induced lack of adequate crop cover.

The desingation also allows farmers to withdraw from 1991 Acreage Reduction Program for the crop which was prevented from being planted or which failed.

In addition:

• Haying and grazing on set aside land has been authorized in 49 counties. Contact the local ASCS office for more information.

• Emergency livestock feed programs are being activated. Counties have until Oct. 31 to file for a program to assist livestock producers in making cash assistance available for feed purchases, or to provide for low cost purchases of Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) owned stocks of feed. There were 35 counties approved last week.

• Federal crop insurance people began preparing claims on many of the 7,139 farms with active policies in the state. However, according to Unangst, farmers, program participants or not, should visit local USDA offices to determine what options they have and to get advice on the disposal of failed crops, late crop options, etc.

• All other federal and non-federal agriculture services are gearing, or are geared up to tackle the drought problem and to provide informational assistance.

As of yet, no direct cash assistance program has been established. However, federal politicians have said they are working to introduce legislation which would do so in light of the number of outstanding drought loans made in 1988.

In Lancaster County, Ray Brubaker, county executive ASCS director, and chair of the USDA county emergency board said in a statement, "The action (by the federal government) represents recognition that the severe weather conditions had a serious affect on Pennsylvania's agriculture despite recent rains."

Brubaker said the worst damage was done early in the growing season in Lancaster and that he expects improvements in haying and on grazing land.

From the federal level, on Tuesday, Secretary Madigan announced his intention to allow haying and grazing on Conservation Reserve Program acreage in those 60 counties because of the drought.

"We would prefer not to hay or graze CRP lands," Madigan said. "We are responding to isolated situations with a cautious, prudent program that sustains the environmental protections that are the heart of the CRP."

Before haying and grazing can be allowed, however, there are requirements which must be met. Requirements which are more restrictive than in past drought years in which haying and grazing on CRP was permitted.

According to Madigan, qualifying farmers in counties where rainfall and forage are at least 40 percent below normal are eligible to apply for haying and grazing on CRP on the condition that:

• All determinations are made on a county-by-county basis. All applications are to be reviewed in Washington for accuracy.

• There will be a 50 percent offset in CRP payments for the current contract year.

• Individual producers must show a 40 percent loss in forage production.

• Hay harvested may not be sold, but must be used on to maintain the producers own livestock. Leasing of grazing privileges will not be permitted.

• Hay harvest and livestock information will have to be submitted to the county ASCS office.

• At least 23 percent of the field must be left undisturbed for wildlife cover. And if the ground is to be hayed, at least 25 percent of the total acres in continguous fields must be left undisturbed.

• Any permanent destruction of CRP cover must be re-established at owner expense. Also vegetative cover specifications will not be waived to the drought.

• No haying or grazing will be allowed on cover planted after Dec. 1, 1989. Covers planted between July 13, 1989 and Dec. 1, 1989 must be inspected and approved by an SCS official before any grazing is allowed.

• Only one cutting of hay will be allowed, and no haying after Sept. 15.

• Hayed acres must have at least 3 inches of stubble remaining.

• Each county grazing period and the stocking rate is to be determined by the ASC county committee. There will be no grazing after Oct. 1.

• No assistance will be provided for livestock facilities, such as fences or watering equipment on CRP land.

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — In Mifflin County this year, livestock leaders and Youth Fair officials were faced with an interesting dilemma - not enough space because of an increase in livestock club membership and projects at the fair. Last year's increase left both livestock barns filled to capacity and club enrollment indicated more animals this year.

Spurred by the need for more space, Beef Club leader Paula Glick brought together 4-H and FFA leaders, the Livestock Committee of the Fair Board, and others to discuss additional space.

The resulting project, a 52 ft. x 60 ft. roofed structure with permanent bleachers along one wall, will serve as a show ring and sale arena.

Building foreman Wayne Fogelman, a contractor from Siglerville, noted the community effort. "There were 40-50 volunteers here to set the trusses. On Saturday mornings and Wednesday evenings, we had 15-20 people. Everything went together nice," he said.

Paula Glick, funding coordinator, mentioned area businesses who donated machinery, labor, or supplies. The youth helped raise money with ham sandwich sales, raffles, and a horse show.

With projects in place, the Mifflin County Youth Fair began with a ribbon-cutting ceremony (sheep shears, of course) followed by the Swine Show.

Mostoller Steer Named Champion At Somerset

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — Above 70 market steers were exhibited during the Market Steer Show at the county fairgrounds here. Greta Mostoller, 18 of Boswell, competing for the final time, saw her 1,265 pound Maine Cross steer named the Grand Champion. It was the big "Number 3" for Mostoller who repeated her victory from the years 1986 and 1989, and found happy tears cascading down her cheeks.

Mostoller declares that selling her steer at the Junior Livestock Sale will be an emotional time. She says she has formed a very special attachment to "Dillon," who seems to reciprocate the affection.

She will enter the Conemaugh Valley Memorial Hospital School of Nursing this fall. With her sister, Rachael, the girls have also started a business of selling club calves and lambs, despite Rachael's attendance at the University of West Virginia where her junior year is fully covered by the scholarship she won for outstanding judging.

Their parents are Butch and Peg Mostoller to whom Greta gives much credit for her support in 4-H projects these last nine years. "I think that's why we've go so farm in 4-H," she says, "because the family unit is so close."

Kevin Stahl, son of Robert and Doris, Stahl of Somerset, had the reserve grand champion steer. It was the third reserve grand champion for Stahl, he said. (Well, that must be an extremely frustrating position to hold). His Chianina Cross steer weighed 1,275 pounds. He has one brother whose name is Kermit.

The grand champion county bred steer was owned by Tracy Bittner of Meyersdale. Taking reserve champion in the county bred category was Danny Miller of Meyersdale.

Greg McKean was the Type judge. He is the Mercer County Livestock Breeder. Mary Shick was the judge of Showmanship. She is the Washington County Extension Livestock Agent.

Following is a list of top winners:

DHIA Heifer Management

About 200 herds have signed up for the DHIA Heifer Management program. A number of options are available to participating dairymen as to what reports they want to receive on their heifer herd. The percentage of herds choosing each option are given below.

Five herds have 250 cows or more and 25 herds have more than 100 cows. However, 90 herds have less than 50 cows. Overall, average herd size (63.5) is very close to the state average of 61.5 cows for all herds on test.

Enrollment of new herds slowed considerably in April and May. It will likely remain slow until next fall. A strong educational effort by DHIA, AI and Extension should make it possible to reach the goal of 300 herds enrolled during the program's first year.

ARIS QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

ARIS allows dairymen and their authorized veterinarians and nutritional consultants to access individual DHIA herd records from a personal computer to the main computer in State College. Call the State DHIA office number listed in the FOCUS column head to learn more about how you can use this unique DHIA service to increase the profitability of your herd and the DHIA records you produce.

Q. If I subscribe to ARIS, will I be able to automatically access anyone's records in the state?

A. No, you will only be able to access data for the herds which are authorized to you. A dairyman will get automatic access to his own herd when he subscribes to ARIS. Any consultant or dairyman who wishes to access a herd other than his own must have a release form signed by the herd owner. After the form is sent to the state office, it will be checked for accuracy and then herd access will be given to the authorized ARIS user.

Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's this week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania. Remember these are averages so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Drought stricken counties seek relief.

Agway responds.

New balanced-fiber feed compensates for limited forage.

Many farmers in your area are reeling from the effects of the latest drought. For some of you, the need to replace lost fiber in dairy rations has become critical. In response, Agway specialists have met with local farmers to evaluate the situation on a county-by-county basis. The result is Drought Balancer '91, a new feed for use where homegrown forages are in short supply.

Drought Balancer '91 is available in five carefully formulated blends of balanced single feeds with fiber extension. Each is specially balanced for proper nutrition, and specially priced for affordability during a trying time.

Traskdale Pete An Bast Wins Eastern Holstein Show

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks County Correspondent

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Eight-Year-Old Traskdale Pete An Bast, owned by Dale Hostetter and Tom Lyon of Annville, Lebanon Co., was named grand and senior champion of the Eastern Championship Holstein Show held last week at the fairgrounds here.

"She excells in every category," said judge John Burket on giving Hostetter's cow top honors over 116 at the show. Alan Hostetter, son of Dale and who showed the cow, said it was the third straight year his cow won grand champion.

Pete An Bast was named best udder and also won second place earlier this month in the aged cow category at the South Central Holstein Show in Shippensburg.

Burket, of East Freedom, Blair Co., said the top cows could go on to more shows and could compete with the best.

A three-Year-Old cow, Sonnen-Acres Starbuck Dulci, owned by Peter Sonnen of Richland, Lebanon Co., picked up most of the other honors, winning reserve grand champion of the overall show as well as reserve senior champion.

In the youth division, Dulci won grand and senior champion.

She also was named best bred-and-owned of the show and second-best udder.

Also in the youth division, 4-Year-Old Walnut Hills Triple Bart, owned by Dianne S. Glock of Mifflin County, won reserve senior champion and reserve grand champion.

Pennwood Farms of Morgantown R.D. 1 was named premier breeder and exhibitor at the show.

The grand champion of the Kutztown Fair the previous week, 3-Year-Old Reu-Hel Farms Melvin Mint, placed fourth in the 3-Year-Old class.

"There was more competition here," said Connie Troutman of Mohrsville R.D. 2, who with her husband, Scott, own Mint.

Donald Seipt Honored By World Dairy Expo

MADISON, WI — Easton, Pennsylvania farmer, Donald V. Seipt, has been selected to receive the highest honor that World Dairy Expo gives to a dairyman -- recognition as the 1991 World Dairy Expo Dairyman of the Year. Seipt will receive the honor at the Expo in Madison, Wisconsin, October 2-6.

Seipt operates Keystone Farm, a registered Holstein herd. He is a graduate of Penn State University with a bachelor's degree in Dairy Science Production.

The dairyman was nominated by the Holstein Association of America because of his leadership in that and other associations. He has served for 12 years as a director for the Holstein Association and has also served as President. He is a past president of the National Dairy Shrine.

According to Carl Butler, Acting Executive Secretary of the Association, "As president of the Purebred Dairy Cattle Association (PDCA) and National Dairy Shrine, (Seipt's) involvement and leadership was, and is, instrumental in bringing segments of the dairy industry into closer working relationships, benefiting not only the organizations affected but, their respective memberships."

Butler commends Seipt's statesmanship during the recent difficult time when the Holstein Association implemented a building expansion program and selected a new Executive Secretary.

Seipt is also credited as being instrumental in the revitalization of the PDCA, an organization in which he is currently serving his second term as president.

PDCA Secretary-Treasurer, Bradford Ellsworth, says of Seipt, "The most sterling attribute about Don is his impeccable honesty and integrity. He is a very conscientious man, striving at all times to do the right thing."

Keystone farm has bred 47 excellent cows, 4 excellent bulls and received many production and breeding awards. Currently milking 85-90 cows, most of which were bred personally by Seipt, the farm has a rolling herd average of 23,702 pounds of milk with 915 pounds of fat.

Seipt has been widely recognized by dairy groups inside and outside Pennsylvania.

breeder from Hanover, who spoke about the supreme champion. "The boar is representative of the breed — it's a long, lean kind of pig, durable, and can live a long, long time on a concrete floor."

The supreme champion gilt went to Todd and Cheryl Bennecoff. The 350-pound Jan. 1991 Poland China gilt was bred from the Keystone International Livestock Exposition champion gilt winner, according to Todd.

My corn acres are planted to hybrids that pass my test.

I've learned over the years that almost everything works better if I have a plan; and that includes deciding which hybrids should go on the bulk of my corn acres. That's why no new hybrid makes it into my "permanent" lineup until I've seen it on my own farm for at least two years.

Take my Jacques 7820, for example. I started with it because it looked good on a neighbor's place all season long. Well, the two years I tested it were about as different from each other as any two years could be. But both times, 7820 was right up at the top in yields and acted like it was bred just for those conditions.

That made me wonder if I really needed to do my own testing — but I like the extra level of confidence it gives me.

Don't get me wrong. I trust the results of Jacques own testing program. But the hybrids I plant have to pass my test, too. Jacques 7820 did.

Wivell's Holstein Named Supreme Cow

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Janelle Wivell's 3-year-old Holstein was named supreme champion of the youth entries in the recent Elizabethtown fair dairy show.

A small local show, there were four breed represented by 85 animals. Though the number of animals was relatively small, the showcase of local dairy animals included a number of animals worthy or much higher level breed competitions, according to show judge Tom Boyer.

Boyer, who works as an evaluator for an artificial insemination company in addition to breeding registered Holsteins and milking about 45 cows on his 130-acre farm, said, "The quality of this show was good. A couple (of cattle) could have gone to Kutztown and won. I enjoyed it."

In referring to Kutztown, Boyer was talking about a regional Holstein show which sets the stage for a state show. The regional breed association-sponsored shows are serious competitions among breeders.

Janelle and her sister Nikelle have been regularly showing HOslteins at the Elizabethtown Fair. Last year it was Nikelle's Holstein which won the supreme title.

In the Holstein breed, Ruby Bollinger showed the reserve grand in the open division. In the youth division, Nikelle held the reserve grand title.

In the Ayrshire competition, Grant Campbell's entries almost gave him a clean sweep of the champions, with Elizabeth Spickler preventing that by taking reserve junior champion.

Heather and Jason Henisee went home with premium award money in the Guernsey competition. Heather's entries took all but the reserve junior champion, which Jason's entry captured.

And in the Jersey breed, the Dice family owned all class winners and champions. Brenda Dice's animals took the senior and grand champions, while the junior champion was captured by Edward Dice. The open show reserve junior champion was shown by Harold and Audrey Dice, and the youth division reserve junior champion was shown by Andrew Dice.

Nikelle Wivell shows her trophy and reserve grand champion Holstein in the youth division.

250 John Deere Dealers See Five New Tractors, Other Equipment

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — "As agriculture goes, so goes the John Deere Company," said Gary Frazer, general manager of the John Deere Company in Columbus, Ohio. "Our business is cyclical, tied to cash farm income and receipts. If the American farmer does well, John Deere does well."

Frazer was in Lancaster this week to address one of five regional dealer meetings. Two-hundred fifty dealers from New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey attended the meeting at the Host Farm Wednesday evening and Thursday morning.

"We have a good dealer group," Frazer said. "There is a lot of loyalty, a lot of enthusiasm, a lot of tradition with the John Deere dealer organization. I suppose that's logical for a company that's 154 years old."

William Driver, district manager, agreed. "The dealers have build new facilities and remodeled old ones," Driver said. "They have hired new salesmen and servicemen. Our dealers generally have a very positive attitude."

The dealer meeting was called to introduce five new tractors, a new manure spreader, and a new combine.

"We have made some updates to our 150 to 200 H.P. tractors," Frazer said. "We are responding to what customers have told us they want. The company had a series of customer focus meetings over the last three years. We have listened to what our customers want changed and what they don't want changed.

"We are trying to get our whole organization focused on the objective to exceed our customers needs. We have fewer farmers with large farms. Their needs are changing and we are trying to get the company and the dealers focused on providing the right goods and services that meet these needs.

"I would be naive not to recognize that, particularly in the East, we have had some difficult times. Dry weather and low milk prices have been a concern of a lot of farmers. This fact will probably not go away right away. But I think underlying these short term realities there is reason for optimism in our business. The financial health of a lot of our farm customers is better than ever. They paid off a lot of debt. Their balance sheets are better. And a lot of equipment has not been replaced in some time.

"We feel the longer term prospects for agriculture are good. we all have a fundamental need for food and fiber," Frazer said.

Lancaster Conservation District Offers Free Tilling

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Reduce erosion this winter and break up hard pan by slit-tilling this fall. The Lancaster County Conservation District will offer their slit-tiller to any farmer in Lancaster County free of charge for use on up to 5 acres. Farmers who like the job that the slit-tiller does can use it for more than 5 acres by paying maintenance charge of $2.50 per acre.

Slit-till is a tillage practice that utilizes straight narrow chisel teeth on 30 inch spacings. It leaves about 2 times the residue cover as the chisel plow and the same amount of surface roughness. Slit-till, however, leaves the soil loose enough to absorb the rains, yet solid enough so erosion can not take place. Slit-till systems reduces runoff 40% when compared to chisel plow and moldboard plow systems on 1989 test plots in West Lampeter Township, Lancaster County.

To maximize the benefits of the slit-till system, all work should be on the contour. The combination of slits and undisturbed soil can then act as small terraces, keeping more soil, water, and nutrients on the field where they can be used by the crop.

For any doubters, try side by side comparisons with your present system and the slit-till system. Experience indicates that your yields will not change, but your costs and erosion will be less.

For more information about the slit-till system, or to use the slit-tiller on a free trial basis, Contact Eric Ashley at the Lancaster County Conservation District office at 717-299-5361.

PMMB Visits Farms

ted was in the form of short notes about the crop and forage conditions found on farms they visited in 37 counties.

Though conditions have been reported to vary within each county, and from farm to farm, their findings offer a glimpse at what kind of drought damage they found during the several-day first hand look.

In the report's cover letter to the board, which was signed by the both men, they said, "We feel we have received sufficient information to give our best estimates of the potential yield and what we feel the produciton might be at maturity.

"Rainfall from now until harvest will help soybeans and grasses. However, corn is setting ear now, and this will determine total yield. We must also take into consideration that many farmers have not been able to pay back the money they borrowed during the 1988 drought."

The report basically consists of quickly jotted notes by both men:

Chester County

My home county — We had one and one half inches of rain at the very critical time of pollination and setting of the ear. The corn in this area has a potential yield of 120 bushes in a good year, with a reduction of yield this year of about 15 percent.

Lancaster County

Similar to Chester County — corn showed much drought damage. Stalks were approximately 5 feet tall, ears about 6 inches long and not fully filled out. If corn is used for silage the potential yeild would be 25 tons per acre with an estimate of 10 this year. Many dairy farms in this area will use all the crop for silage, having to buy their grain needs. Silage tonage potential in this area would be 25 tons in a normal year with about 8 tons per acre this year.

Lebanon County

Corn shorter, soil red, the pastures gone, the alfalfa dry and 4 inches tall. The corn's potential at 90 bushels — yield this year 20 bushels.

Dauphin County

Corn stalks were short and no ears appeared. Poultry in this area will not eat fodder and their very small yield of corn will be about 7 to 10 bushels. Some beef and dairy farmers are chopping green alfalfa for feed now, therefore, there will not be any haylage left to feed next winter.

Perry County

Not many dairy farmers to buy corn for silage, crop farmers do not know what they will do with this corn. Soybeans are doing fairly well, but beginning to show signs of lack of water.

Juniata County

More of the same conditions. they had a rain shower several days earlier, but we saw no signs of it as we passed through.

Mifflin County

We saw several fields of corn that yielded 50 to 60 bushels and next to it were crops that would yield approximately 25 bushels. This corn had been planted early.

Huntingdon County

We spent the first night here. The prison farm's corn was dark green but short; it looked like half a crop. The oats looked like they would yield about one-third or 30 bushels. Second cutting alfalfa was short — some areas had good rain which might help to a degree.

Blair County

Approximately the same conditions. Yield might be 45 bushels.

Cambria County

Fields appeared a little greener. Oats would yield 65 bushels, corn 75 bushels. Yields would be reduced by 10 to 15 percent of normal.

Indiana County

Cabbage looked good; corn looked normal and appeared to be in the 85-90 bushel range. Blueberries looked good and were being picked.

Armstrong County

Yields about the same as Indiana County. Fields looked greener due to gas wells in the middle of them.

Butler County

Near normal yeilds. Alfalfa second cutting looked good, but not yet harvested.

Mercer County

Grove City Area. Crops appeared nearly normal, but were starting to show lack of water.

Venango and Crawford counties

Corn was growing nearly normal, but starting to need water in this critical time of pollination and ear setting. Around Meadville (Crawford County) crops began to show signs of stress conditions. Around Titusville — the grass was gone — one farmer said he was feeding next winter's stored feed to 1,000 head of 400-800 pound beef cattle. Corn might yield about a half crop.

Clarion and Jefferson counties

Looked like about half a crop of corn. A few showers could make or break the crop.

Clearfield County

It had been raining here, crops with more rain could make 50 to 60 bushel with a potential of 90 bushel in a normal year.

Centre County

Showed a definite lack of rain; some corn suffering; soybeans did not germinate well. Some fields showed a total loss of the corn crop — no ears emerging at all.

Clinton County

Travelling Route 64 from Centre County into Clinton County all appeared lost. There are not many dairy or beef farmers to use this corn for silage. Corn plants look like pineapple plants.

Union County

Starting to show stress conditions — yield approximately half a crop if it rains.

Northumberland County

Hundreds of acres of corn only three to five feet tall. Soybeans average six inches in height — should be two feet tall. Much of the seed never germinated.

Montour and Columbia counties

Conditions were not good. Some of the area may get one-third to half a yield.

Luzerne County

Same as Montour and Columbia counties. Some areas might provide about half a crop silage.

Carbon County

Hazleton Area (traveling to Carbon County). The mountains seemed greener and the corn looked better.

Schuylkill County

Looked better than the neighboring counties, but still not good. Corn yield looked like 50 to 70 bushel.

Lehigh County

Looked the best of all counties for corn. Yield about 90 bushel; soybeans 45-50 bushel — a near normal crop.

Berks County

Corn yield 90-100 bushel; soybeans 50 bushel, alfalfa normal.

Adams County

My son's fields were appraised by Federal Crop Insurance adjuster (first one hundred acres of his 400 acre crop) and appraised at a zero bushel yield.

Bedford, Fulton, Cumberland, York, Franklin, and Adams counties

Chairman Lanius traveled throughout these counties and found yield to be approximately 30 percent.

There is the possibility of high nitrates causing sickness in the cattle in the event they are fed too extensively. It will be necessary to feed hay or haylage in the ration, and much of it will have to be purchased.

A large crowd of farmers watch a new combine demonstrated at the C. B. Hoober and Son field day along Route 301 just into Maryland at the Delaware state line.

Hoober Field Day Shows Case IH Equipment In Action

MIDDLETOWN, DE — Across the fields of the Coleman farm, a little whirlwind moved lazily, floating pieces of corn fodder into a circular pattern.

The whirlwind was caused by $1,500,000 worth of working tractors and other tillage and harvesting equipment showing off at a field demonstration sponsored by C. B. Hoober and Son, the Case IH dealer with headquarters at Intercourse and Middletown.

The demonstration day was held along Route 301, six miles south of town, just over the state line into Maryland.

Along with a full line of Case IH tractors, a number of new type machines were working. For example, a combine with a corn head that shreds the corn stalks at the same time the corn is harvested. No additional chopping of the stalks is necessary before no-til or grain drilling operations.

An eight bottom plow with 18-inch boards that switches plowing angle from the tractor seat to accommodate the return trip through the field was working.

A new packer that has no center bearings was shown.

The new Case IH combine with a lateral floating "flex" head platform follows the field contours.

A tool to break up the hard pan and not disturb the top of the ground was demonstrated. Charles Hoober, owner, said this tool meets the requirements of the soil conservation programs to leave 30 percent of the residue on top of the ground. Not a sub-soiler, the machine acts more like a split-tiller.

Hoober said business has been good this year. He noted that the new management at the Case IH company has agricultural background and said they will direct the company in favor of agriculture. Hoober also said that with the company's programs farmers have incentives to purchase equipment now.

"We have less farmers," Hoober said. "But we have more farmers who cover 1,000 acres or more. They farm more acres with less equipment to justify the cost of the equipment."

New Feed Laboratory Opens

LITTLESTOWN (Adams Co.) — Myers Analytical Laboratory has scheduled an open house to showcase their new testing laboratory and other recently completed facilities on Thurs., Sept. 5, from 10:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m.

Featured speaker is Dr. Marshall E. McCullough, a leading ruminant nutrition consultant.

"We recently completed the new testing laboratory and felt the time was right to have an open house," said Ginger Myers, who runs the laboratory. Included were renovations to a barn in which 22 tie stalls were removed and a new laboratory was installed in the spring this year.

The Myers Analytical Laboratory, which employs four full-time, can perform 300-400 samples per week on forage, soils, and water, and routinely analyzes the nutritional values of livestock feed.

The tour begins at 10:30 a.m. on Thursday with a hog roast luncheon at noon.

McCullough, professor emeritus of animal nutrition at the Experiment Station of the University of Georgia, has written he book, "Optimum Feeding of Dairy Cattle," which introduced optimum rations, or total mixed rations (TMR), for dairy cows. He writes regularly for "Hoard's Dairyman" magazine and "Farmshine" newspaper.

McCullough will speak at 12:30 p.m. on the topic, "Planning for the Feeding of Dairy Cows Under Drought Conditions."

"We feel extremely fortunate to have Dr. McCullough speak out our open house," said Myers. Reservations are requested by contacting Myers at (717) 359-4216.

"This is not a photograph, but a computer image," says Robert Smith of the California-based RMS and Associates, a public relations firm spearheading the NASA educational program. Smith's presentation illustrates the application of remote sensing satellite imagery to methods of improving the efficiency of the world's food supply production.

Computer imagery uses infrared sensing to "read" details of the earth from satellites circling the world from some 500 miles into space. Originally developed for military applications, more recent users have been the oil, gas, and forestry industries for resource exploration and development.

"We've come to a strong realization that agriculture can be a benefactor," says Smith. "With satellite imagery, many of the needs of the land and livestock can be seen and addressed more readily."

Stress factors on crops are especially visible via the infrared imagery, Smith notes. Insect infestations, disease, drought, nutrient levels are among those factors that can be detected in very early stages due to subtle changes in color intensity.

"Infrared technology shows itself much more noticeably. All living objects emit electro magnetic radiation," he explains. "If a crop is healthy, it shows as a field of red." The healthy red intensifies as crops approach their maximum harvest stage.

"Blemishes, dark spots, shadings of coloration are telltale signs of problems for the farmer. The user of satellite imagery must know his land and his fields and can then deal with a problem sooner."

Satellites revolving every 90 to 93 minutes around the earth send back images, each of an area 110 by 105 miles. Present technology allows for magnification of each image down to a quarter-acre size. By 1994, magnification will be to an eighth-acre, allowing a producer to almost pick out a field of corn stalk by stalk.

Even a small patch of insect or disease infestation or cluster of weed growth will be exposed by the imagery. Livestock implanted with microchips will allow for tracking of their whereabouts over large grazing areas, even allow for checks on their health conditions and metabolism based on the imagery.

With such advanced technology, problems with crops on any continent can be examined in minute detail. Thus, such factors as world crops yields, and their impacts on commodity markets and food and feedstuff supplies could be assessed much more quickly than with present methods.

A single image with the present commercial satellite technology can be purchased for about $1,700. However, computer equipment for reading and interpreting the data from space currently runs upwards of $30,000.

"Individuals will not be the major purchasers," Smith says of the satellite imagery market. Instead, commercial satellite firms are gearing up to serve farmer groups -- cooperatives, farmer's associations, departments orf agriculture -- through which individual producers could subscribe and access the data.

NASA's Link to Agriculture will be presented several times daily in York Fair's Horticulture Hall, Friday, September 6 through Monday, September 9.

High-Moisture Grain

Harvest Earlier:

If your livestock feed is corn, it reaches full maturity and nutritional value when the kernel is between 24 and 28% moisture. Field losses are maintained at 26-28% moisture content. Beyond that stage, the longer the crop remains in the field, the higher the potential field losses.

The Added Value of High-Moisture Grain:

High-moisture grain has shown itself to be up to 10% more efficient than dry corn in producing beef gains; up to 8% more efficient than conventional grind- and- mix dry corn ration in producing hog gains; and up to 5% more efficient than dry corn in producing milk.*

Reduce Storage Losses:

High-moisture grain stored inside a Harvestore® structure is protected from insects, rats and mice, while dry matter losses associated with fermentation is reduced to 3 or 4%... even when grain is stored for a relatively long time.

Japanese Woman Wants To 'Experience' East Coast

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

FAWN GROVE (York Co.) — Aki Iwai is a first for York County.

The pretty 19-year-old Japanese woman is York County's first-ever visitor through the International 4-H Youth Exchange (IFYE) program. Since July 28, she's been part of the Robert and Holly Barr family of Fawn Grove.

Aki's hostess is the Barr's daughter, Tanya. Tanya herself was one of York County's first three 4-Hers to participate last summer in the IFYE program, spending a month with a German host family. And because of her enthusiasm for the IFYE experience, Tanya applied to host an exchangee at her family's rural Fawn Grove home.

Aki traveled with a group of 27 Japanese exchangees to Pennsylvania through their counterpart of IFYE, known as UTREK. About 30 younger Japanese students are also visiting through a sister organization known as LABO. The UTREK visitors actually arrived on July 24 and spent their first four days at CamKiwanis, near Williamsport.

"We did hiking, Indian crafts, campfires," says Aki, who speaks English very well.

Like all Japanese students, she began studying English in junior high. A visit to Hawaii gave her additional exposure to the spoken language. And, three years ago, she visited a family in Utah on her first UTREK exchangee.

"I wanted to experience the East Coast, to see the typical American lifestyle here," she smiles of her reasons for applying for the Pennsylvania visit. "I want to see where the history of America took place."

The Barr family planned a full schedule of activities to share with their Japanese guest. Included are visits to Washington D.C., Baltimore's Inner Harbor, and Lancaster County's Dutch Apple Dinner Theatre. A camping retreat at southern York County's Camp Echo Trail, horseback riding, a family get-together and corn roast - and, of course, a trip or two to local shopping malls - are giving Aki an intimate look at the American family experience.

Aki is also taking part in several 4-H activities during her stay. She attended State Days at Penn State during the last week of July, observing the hippology competition in which Tanya took part. The county horse roundup and a visit with Tanya's 4-H club to the Lehman Center in York, a temporary family-crisis home for children, offer other glimpes of the varied 4-H programs.

A native of Tokyo, Aki is the only child in her family, which includes her dog, "a mutt." She is in her second year at the Jissen Women's College in Tokyo, majoring in home economics. Her studies include food science, chemistry, fabrics, childhood development, with cooking added to next year's schedule.

Next year's studies will also include driving school, Aki says. While 18 is the age at which the Japanese can test for a driver's license, the classes are very full. Aki now makes a daily, 90-minute-each-way communit to her classes by train, from a station a 15-minute walk from her home. Classes from from April to July, again from late September through December, with a two-week Christmas vacation, and resume again through January and February.

While studying, Aki manages to hold down two jobs as well. Tuesdays and Thursdays she sells tickets for a live theatre near her home. Sundays she works as "a sort of waitress" at Tokyo Chinzan-su, a noted garden restaurant.

"Mostly I work with wedding parties," she explains. "June is a busy time for weddings, also spring and autumn."

She still finds some spare time in which to work at perfecting her tea ceremony skills. The tea ceremony, known as "cha-no-yo" or "sado", is a historic and cultural tradition of Japan, practiced to serve and honor guests with artfully-prepared tea and special sweet cakes. At age 11 she joined at tea ceremony club in her school.

"My grandmother does the tea ceremony; she helps me," Aki explains of the art young women practice in the traditional manner. "You never finish learning it; you just try to get better at it."

She also enjoys listening to music and concerts - hard rock included - and watching sports events. Skiing is a favorite pastime during the winter, when snow blankets Tokyo and mountainous resort areas.

Summer weather in Tokyo, according to Aki, is similar to that in late July in Pennsylvania - hot and sticky.

With chain restaurants like McDonalds, Wendy's and Pizza Hut plentiful in Tokyo, and through her earliest visit to Utah, American food is familiar to Aki.

"I like hamburgers, with cheese," she grins. "And mayonnaise" Ice cream and pizza are other favorites. So is chocolate.

"You should see how much chocolate she got at Hershey," teases Holly Barr, her American "mom". A visit to Hershey Park was one of their first trips after Aki arrived. In addition to stocking up on chocolate, Aki has been acquiring T-shirts, a favorite souvenir of her travels. And, at the top of her shopping list is "a big American flag."

While she'll take home T-shirts, she brought with her a garment of a much more traditional Japanese nature. The cotton "yukata" is a kind of kimono, worn for festival events.

"It is not formal, but not really casual," she says of the one-size-fits-all cotton garment. Excess length is folded ovelr and belted at the waist, then covered with the decorative "obi," the wide, heavy sash with a large bow worn in the back.

More formal kimonos are of silks and brocades and special ones are often passed down as a family heritage. They are sold at both department stores and at special kimono shops, according to Aki, who brought with her colorful advertising flyers for the traditional garments.

Children wear kimonos on special occasions at ages 3, 5 and 7, when they go to the shrines. Kimonos are also worn on New Year's Day, when the Japanese go to the shrines for prayers.

Most of the time, though Aki and her friends prefer the casual favorites, like shorts, jeans, soft-shirt tops and sneakers. Uniforms must be worn to classes by school-age students, but colleges permit more casual attire.

Aki does not anticipate presenting programs or talks on her Pennsylvania visit, but she will be required to write a report on her experiences and feelings about the visit.

Such follow-ups enable organizations like IFYE and UTREK to plan and oikusg future international exchange programs, like those experienced by Aki and Tayno.

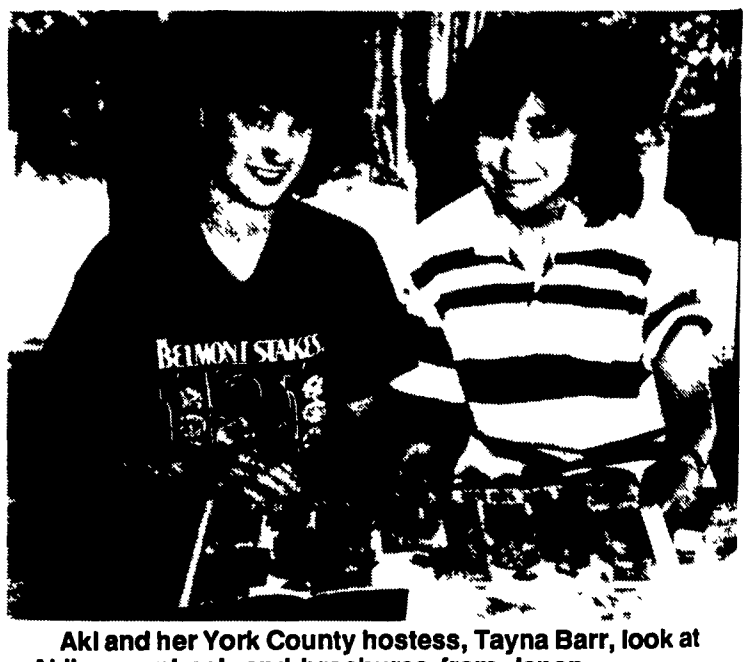
In Germany, where Tanya visited last year for a month, the international exchangee program is known as STEP. Through IFYE and STEP, Tanya and a dozen other Americans were hosted in various parts of Germany.

Tanya was hosted by the Schmidt family of Bad Nauheim, a little town in central Germany, north of Frankfort. During her visit, she traveled to Berlin, Munich, Bavaria, and through the countries of Lichenstein and Austria. Her German "sister" took her to visit the famous "Cinderella" castle, from which the well-known castle of Disneyland was patterned.

Germans are avid soccer fans, and the World Cup playoffs were going on during Tanya's stay. She was among the millions watching German television when they won the final match.

In late August, Tanya will travel to the University of Wisconsin at Madison to begin freshman studies in agricultural education. A month later, her Japanese "sister" will resume her daily commute to the Jissen Women's College.

Aki Awai models a "yukata," a cotton-fabric kimono worn for festival-type occasions. Fabric is a navy print, accented with the red obi, or belt. A back view of the Aki's yukata shows the decorative bow of the obi, or wide belt which is worn with a kimono. Excess length of the one-size-fits-all garment is tucked under the obi. Children ages 3, 5, and 7 wear kimonos on special visits to religious shrines. The traditional Japanese garment is also worn to the shrines for prayers at New Year.



Aki and her York County hostess, Tayna Barr, look at Aki's scrapbook and brochures from Japan.

Glennon Doesn't Let Anything Interfere With Goats

BETH WHITMAN PITZER
Cumberland Co. Correspondent

Newberg (Cumberland Co.) — In June 1991 Heather Glennon became the Pennsylvania Dairy Goat Association Youth Representative. Heather, 15, is a junior at Shippensburg High School. She is the daughter of Robert and Mary Lou Brennen. Her role as Youth Representative is one that she seems to enjoy very much. Her love for goats filters through her conversation. When asked how she enjoys her new role, she said, "I love talking to people (about goats) and like to share information about how to improve their goats."

So far she has represented the Dairy Goat Association at Ag Progress Days where she answered people's questions about the animals and handed out literature. She will be represented with the other Commodity Queens during the Farm Show, presenting the Governor with products from her commodity. She shared that one year the Youth Representative presented the Govenor with a stuffed animal- a goat. She'll also be able to represent the association at 4-H shows and fairs and regional shows. The closest regional show to Pennsylvania is in South Carolina. In 1993, Pennsylvania is hosting the National Show. It's held annually between July and September.

Heather's story of how she began her interest and love for goats began eight years ago when she was only seven years old. At the time she was living in Florida with her parents when a friend needed to get rid of the goats because they kept getting into the cattle trough! The story goes that the farmer ordered his wife to be rid of the goats by the time he came back home. So the Glennons picked the two goats up in their '67 Chevy! These two goats expanded into the herd of 30 goats that Heather raises.

Heather shares that the goats have wonderful personalities. "They make great friends. Some are bossy. Some stay behind." It's apparent that Heather is very attached to them. Each of the 30 goats has a name. Aggie was the first goat and is still in the herd today. She is a Nubian, a breed originating from Egypt by way of Great Britain. Nubians are distinguishable by their floppy ears and their Roman nose, an arched nose. Their milk also has the highest butterfat content.

In the herd, Heather also has many Oberhasli. Oberhasli are a breed from Switzerland known for their upright ears and brown coloring with black markings. These beautiful animals can often be pictured in front of the sloping Alpine Mountains.

Each morning Heather arises at 4:00 a.m. to begin milking the goats. It takes about five minutes to milk each animal. Presently they are milking about 12-13 goats. The goats average about 1,500 pounds of milk a year. However, some goats produce as much as 4,000 pounds a year. Their milk stays strictly on the farm for the calves.

Goats breed in the fall and bear young or "freshen" in the spring. They typically have two to three "kids". One day after school Heather was surprised to find Aggie was delivering not two or three goats- but five goats- quintuplets! The female "kids" stay on the farm as part of the replacement herd; the male are sold for meat.

Heather's mother, Mary Lou Brennen thinks that it's been a wonderful experience for her daughter. Heather naturally loves to talk about the animals and it's been a natural outlet for her to do this. Mrs. Brennen has made a conscious effort to give Heather the responsibility of caring for the goats. The only thing that Heather doesn't like is getting up so early every morning to milk the goats.

Two years ago while the Glennons were living in Maryland, they were asked to help do a NBC News Special for Dairy Goat Awareness Week. Every year the special week is held in June. So, while they had a news crew on their farm doing the story, the goat licked the camera lens!

The goats are pretty healthy and are fed a prepared mix of goat feed, hay, and water. This year has been a little tougher with the drought. The animals have eaten more hay. They are a healthy herd. They receive their check-up annually from the vet. They are also a member of DHIA, Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

Heather plans to go to college after graduation to study Veterinary Science.

Heather feeds the goats a few flakes of hay. The drought has left the pastures bare, so the goats are regularly fed hay to make up for the pasture loss.

Pictured are two of the breeds Heather has in her herd. Oberhasli goats, left, have upright ears; Nubians, right, have floppy ears.

Extravaganza Showcases 4-H Activities

BETH WHITMAN PITZER
Cumberland Co.
Correspondent

Harrisburg (Dauphin Co.) — This year was the first year Penn State Cooperative Extension in Dauphin County held the 4-H Fair at the same time as the Extension Extravaganza. The blended event offered fun and learning for the whole family. It was held at the Farm Show Complex on August 8,9, and 10.

Thrsday night opened with an innovative 4-H Theatre Arts Production. Energy and movement marked this portion of the program. Four urban 4-Hers created and starred in an African dance, a street dance, jazz, and a solo creation of dance or poetry. These youth are part of a 15-member club at Roland Intermediate School in Harrisburg.

Urban 4-H leader Helen Riley has coordinated and taught this new group of 12-and 13-year-olds. She shared an interesting philosophy. She believes it's important to "channel all the energy in a positive direction." All of her work was reflected in the creative expression of the arts at the opening of the theatre presentation.

This theatre presentation is part of the Learn and Earn Project. More than 75 youth learn about youth empowerment, entrepreneur, communication skills, interpersonal skills, and life skills. One of her goals is to eventually help them write and direct their own play to teach them how to resolve their own problems. Each 4-H'er received a merit ribbon in each category.

Scott Thor took first place in his entry of the Arab with the Elephant in the Animal Dress-Up contest.

Children attending the event were attracted not only to the dance, but also to the petting zoo held in the next arena that featured goats, rabbits, chickens, sheep, cows, and pigs. Neil Baughman, 8, told about the numerous competitions he entered. He was giving a demonstration of tattooing for a rabbit, entering a travel kit as a sewing project, and entering other animals as well.

When asked what event he was most looking forward to, he said it was the rabbit demonstration. He explained the steps in tattooing the left ear of a rabbit. Alcohol is used first, followed by black or green ink to number and initial the ear. And, of course, you have to make sure you use a different number each time!

Part of Neil's responsibilities on the farm are to feed, water, and milk "Snowflake", his Alpine goat. He explained that Alpine Goats are distinguishable because of their straight ears.

During intermission of the tractor pull, the "Animal Dress Up" was held. This year's Animal Dress-Up featured a zoo of ideas. First place went to Scott Thor, dressed as an Arab with his elephant-looking horse. Brian Shall took second place with "Uncle Sam". "Uncle Sam" was a horse cleverly dressed in colors of the American Flag. Laura Thor took third place with her rabbit dressed as "Alice in Wonderland".

The tractor pull gave a great opportunity for children to have fun. Arider on a bicycle pulls a tractor. The tractor is weighted so that the further the rider goes on the bicycle, the more the weight pulls until it stops. In the 7 and 8-year-old class, Isaac won first place of eight in his age group. Classes were also held for 3 and 4-year-olds, 5 and 6-year-olds, 9 and 10-year-olds, and 18 to 88-year-old ladies!

What an experience the latter was. The director places a marker on concrete and blindfolds the participant. Then the lady rides until she thinks she has hit the marker. It looks difficult and is even more difficult than it looks! It's also a lot of fun.

In addition to being fun, many exhibits were educational. One of the most striking was an exhibit entitled, "Waste Management Options". Looking at it gave participants a visual interpretation of a waste wall. Pieces of trash dramatize the trash generated each day and the need to recycle. Other exhibits included topics on juggling work and family, childcare and canning.

From creative dance to demonstrations to animals and exhibits, the first time at combining 4-H and Extravaganza seemed like a striking success.

Neil Baughman, 8, a member of 4-H Fun Seekers Goat and Rabbit Club in Dauphin County brings his goat "Snowflake" to the Fair/Extravaganza. He feeds, waters, and milks the goat every day at home.

Labor Day Cook Out

It's Labor Day and you don't need to leave home to celebrate. Fire up the grill and invite the neighbors or other friends to join an end-of-summer backyard barbecue.

Outdoor entertaining is a come-as-you-are, informal affair, but the food can be elegant. The key is to make your get-together as easy for yourself as possible.

One of the keys to elegant, yet easy entertaining is to plan the menu with make-ahead salads and desserts. Try these ideas for your Labor Day celebration.

TANGY SOY CHICKEN AND PINEAPPLE

20 broiler-fryer chicken breast halves
2 cans (20 ounces each) pineapple slices in unsweetened juice
1 cup fresh lime juice
1 cup low-sodium soy sauce
1 tablespoon grated fresh ginger
6 tablespoons cornstarch

Drain juice from pineapple, about 2 cups. In saucepan, mix together pineapple juice, lime juice, soy sauce and ginger. Place cornstarch in measuring cup or small bowl; add 6 tablespoons of the juice mixture and stir until smooth. Over high temperature, place saucepan containing juice mixture and bring to a boil. Stir in cornstarch mixture, continuing to stir until sauce is thickened and smooth. Remove from heat and dip each pineapple slice into sauce. Place pineapple in bowl for later use. Dip each chicken breast half into sauce and place on prepared grill, skin side up, about 8 inches from heat. Place remaining sauce in small saucepan and bring to a boil on stovetop or grill, stirring. Grill chicken, turning and basting with sauce every 10 to 15 minutes, about 45 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. While chicken is cooking, place pineapple slices on grill, 1 minute for each side, turning once. Place a pineapple slice on top of each chicken breast and arrange on platter. Top each piece with a teaspoon of sauce. Makes 20 servings.

CLAMBAKE ON THE GRILL

4 dozen small hard shell clams
4 ½-pound lobsters
4 potatoes, foil wrapped
4 ears corn, shucked and foil wrapped
4 small onions
Seaweed, if available

Soak seaweed to remove sand; place enough seaweed in bottom of a large kettle to make a 4-inch layer. Add 1 quart water and bring to a boil. Kettle can be placed directly on coals or on the lowest setting of the grill rack, but to make the water boil faster, bring it to a boil in the kitchen and then place the kettle on the grill.

Add the potatoes; cover and let steam for 30 minutes. Add the lobsters, corn and onions; cover and cook 15 more minutes. Finally, add the clams and steam until open.

Tangy Soy Chicken and Pineapple is a great way to entertain friends and neighbors at a Labor Day backyard barbecue.

DO-AHEAD MINCED BARBECUE CHICKEN

12 broiler-fryer chicken quarters
1 quart apple cider vinegar
3 cups low-sodium chicken broth
3 teaspoons onion salt
1½ teaspoons coarsely-ground fresh pepper
2 bay leaves
24 oat bran round sandwich buns
1 cup dijon mustard

In large saucepan, mix together vinegar, chicken broth, onion salt, pepper and bay leaves. Over high temperature, bring to a boil. Arrange chicken in a refrigerator bowl, and pour hot vinegar mixture over all. Cover and marinate in refrigerator at least 2 hours. Place chicken on prepared grill, skin side up, about 8 inches from heat. Place 2 cups of the marinade in small saucepan and bring to a boil on grill or stovetop. Grill chicken, turning and basting with boiled marinade every 10 to 15 minutes, about 1 hour or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Remove chicken from bone, discarding bones and skin. Place meat from 4 quarters at a time in food processor and coarsely chop chicken. Repeat with remaining chicken, about 9 cups. Boil remaining marinade to reduce to 1¼ cups; pour over minced chicken. Serve on buns spread with mustard. Garnish with dill pickle slice, if desired. Makes 24 sandwiches.

ANSWER — E.N. Mellinger, 359 May P.O. Rd., Strasburg, is interested in getting in touch with those interested in buying home-frozen corn and home-canned peaches. Her phone number is (717) 687-7500.

ANSWER — Hannah King requested a recipe to make lollipops. Thanks to Cara Brumbaugh for sending a recipe.

Lollipops

32 lollipop sticks
2 cups sugar
¾ cup light corn syrup
¾ cup water
1 teaspoon oil of lemon or ¼ teaspoon oil of peppermint or cinnamon
Few drops food coloring
Candy decorations

Line 4 baking sheets with foil. Arrange lollipop sticks on foil. In heavy 2-quart saucepan, combine sugar, corn syrup and water. Over medium heat, heat to boiling, stirring until sugar is dissolved. With wet pastry brush, wipe side of pan to remove sugar crystals.

Set candy thermometer in place; cook, without stirring, until thermometer reaches 300 degrees or until a small amount of mixture dropped into very cold water separates into hard, brittle threads. Remove from heat.

Stir in flavoring oil and food coloring, working quickly. Drop mixture by tablespoonfuls over end of each lollipop stick. If desired, press candy decorations into hot candy. Cool thoroughly; remove from baking sheets.

ANSWER — Kelly Weaver, Fredericktown, requested the recipe that was published several months ago for Russian Torte. Thanks to a reader for sending a copy.

Russian Torte

4 cups ground nuts
1 cup sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon
4 cups flour, sifted
3 sticks butter
4 egg yolks
¼ cup milk
¼ cup warm water
1 package dry yeast
2 cans apricot filling
2 egg whites for topping
2 tablespoons sugar for topping

Combine nuts, sugar, cinnamon; mix well. Measure ½ cup and set aside for topping.

Combine yeast with water and set aside. Sift flour into bowl; add butter and blend. Add slightly beaten egg yolks, milk, and yeast mixture. Blend and stir batter until it pulls away from sides of bowl. Place on a floured board and knead for a few minutes. Divide and cut dough into 3 sections. Roll the first section of dough to measure 15x10-inches, which should be the same size as your pan. Lightly grease the pan and place the first layer of dough in it. Work edges up side of pan to form a wall for lining. Spread nut mixture evenly over the dough. Roll the second part of dough the same measurement and place over nuts. Spread apricot filling over this dough. Roll remaining dough and spread over apricots. Bake in 350 degree oven for 45 minutes, 10 minutes before baking time is over, beat egg whites and sugar until stiff. Check the torte, if it is done, remove from oven and spread egg whites over hot torte evenly. Sprinkle the remaining ½ cup nuts over egg whites and return to oven for 10 more minutes. When done to a toasty color, remove from oven and while hot, cut into diamond-shaped pieces.

ANSWER — Ginny Atkinson, Bridgeton, N.J. requested a recipe for making Italian Ice and sorbet. Thanks to Cara Brumbaugh, for sending several recipes. Also, check the recipes in the Home On The Range section for a sorbet recipe.

Fruity Sorbetto

2 to 3 cups sugar syrup*
Juice or fruit puree

Prepare sugar syrup and let cool. Prepare puree or juice of your choice. Mix 2 cups of the syrup with berry or pineapple puree; or mix 2 to 3 cups of the syrup with fruit juice.

Pour mixture into an ice- and salt-cooled or self-refrigerated ice cream maker and freeze according to manufacturer's directions. Sorbetto is ready to serve when frozen soft. For a firmer texture, repack with ice and salt according to manufacturer's directions and let stand for 1 to 2 hours; or cover container of self-refrigerated machine and place in freezer for 1 to 2 hours. Makes about 1½ quarts.

*Sugar syrup: In a 2- to 3-quart pan, combine 2½ cups sugar and 2½ cups water. Bring to a boil over high heat; continue to boil, uncovered for 5 minutes. Let cool. If made ahead, cover and refrigerate (syrup will keep indefinitely). Makes 3 cups.

Berry: Whirl 6 cups hulled strawberries, raspberries, or other berries in a blender until pureed. Add ⅓ cup lemon juice to strawberry puree, 1 tablespoon lemon juice to raspberry or other berries. Strain, if desired. Use at once.

Pineapple: Whirl 4 cups fresh pineapple chunks and ¼ cup lemon juice in a blender until pureed. Strain, if desired. Use at once.

Orange: Stir together 2 cups orange juice and ¼ cup lemon juice; add 1 drop each yellow and red food coloring, if desired. Use at once.

Lemon: Stir together 2 cups lemon juice and 2 cups water; add 1 drop yellow food color, if desired. Use at once.

Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

Lancaster Extension Home Economist

We have been told that Americans are losing ground in such vital fields as productivity and education. Now we are told by the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) that we are faltering in another critical realm as well: the fitness of our children.

According to a recent report by the AAP, children are becoming less active. Schools are cutting back on physical activity programs, hours devoted to free play are dwindling, and youngsters are spending more time on sedentary pursuits such as watching TV and playing video games.

Concerned about the problem, the American Academy of Pediatrics has issued the following guidelines to help parents improve the physical fitness of their children.

Infants naturally find ways to exercise their motor skills. There is no evidence that commercial products or organized exercise programs are advantageous.

Swimming programs for toddlers under the age of three or four are not recommended. Swallowed water can enter the bloodstream in quantities great enough to possibly lead to seizures hours after the swimming class. Also, an infection of the small intestine may be transmitted by contaminated pool water.

Parents of toddlers and preschoolers should play active games with their children such as hide-and-seek. TV viewing should be limited to one or two hours a day. By age three, the child should regularly play with other children in preschool, day care or neighborhood play groups.

When children are old enough to begin school, it is time to start learning about fitness and its relationship to health and well-being. Parents should encourage school boards to increase physical-activity time, and should encourage their children to lead active lives at home. Swimming lessons are recommended for children at six years of age.

Children, approximately six to eight years of age, are attracted to community youth sports. An estimated 75 percent of children participate in such programs. However, by the high-school years, the number drops to about 20 percent.

Teenagers need to be taught the benefits of exercise, including such specifics of athletic conditioning as weight control, and strength and endurance training.

It is important to emphasize safety rules and use of protective equipment. It is necessary to discourage risk-taking and the use of dangerous vehicles such as motor bikes, motorcycles and all-terrain vehicles. Adolescents not involved in organized sports should be taught the value of regular exercise and its impact on fitness.

The AAP offers a free brochure, one per family, entitled "Better Health Through Fitness." To receive your free copy, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Teen Fitness, Department C, American Academy of Pediatrics, P. 0. Box 927, Elk Grove, IL 6007. The brochure outlines the importance of physical fitness and aerobic exercise, and provides a chart showing calories burned through various physical activities.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — Mrs. C.M. Haas requested a recipe for sweet potato biscuits served in English's Restaurants. Thanks to Iris Givens, Laurel, Del., who sent the recipe that was originally submitted by Don Herman, president of English's Family Restaurants.

Sweet Potato Biscuits

3½ cups mashed sweet potatoes
1½ cups sugar
1¼ cups margarine, at room temperature
2 cups cake flour
1¼ cups all-purpose flour
3 tablespoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda

Cook sweet potatoes. Rinse with cool water, peel, and drain. Refrigerate until cold. Mash with fork and remove fiber.

Combine first 3 ingredients with mixer on low speed. Add remaining four ingredients and mix well to incorporate. Knead by hand in large bowl until thoroughly mixed.

Refrigerate until dough is cold and stiff. Roll out on floured surface to ¼ -inch thick and cut with a biscuit cutter. Place biscuits on cookie sheet sprayed with cooking spray and bake 15 to 18 minutes at 350 degrees.

Storybook Characters Come To Life At This Park

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

LIGONIER (Westmoreland Co.) — If you love amusement parks (most kids do) then you'll have terrific fun at Idlewild Park in western Pennsylvania.

Idlewild Park is in a real nifty mountain region. It is said by many folks to be one of the most beautful amusement parks in the United States. It is a family park where the enjoyment is for great-grandpa right down to baby sister.

There is Story Book Forest, Jumpin' Jungle, Hootin' Holler', Olde Idlewild, Raccoon Lagoon, Mister Rogers' Neighborhood of Make Believe, H_2OHHH Zone, and Rafters Run.

Remember those wonderful fairy tales your parents read to you? In Story Book Forest you can see all those characters in their storybook setting. Like the Crooked Man in his Crooked House; The Old Woman Who Lived In a Shoe (kids everywhere!); old friends like Goldilocks, Red Riding Hood and Snow White and others.

In Jumpin' Jungle you can use up the energy that you get yelled at for using at home. Here you can climb and jump all you want but don't be surprised if your parents forget to be adults and start acting like kids when they try to do the same thing, You might want to turn your head to laugh.

If you like western action, Hootin' Holler' is the place to see. This western-style town is filled with Ridge Runners and gunslingers, a Wild Horse Saloon, foot-stompin' music and a gazebo for entertainment. There's a rumor goin' round that if you try walkin' through a ploace we call "Confusion Hill," it'll get you plenty mixed up.

Olde Idlewild will make you feel at home. There is a roller coaster and lots of other thrilling rides, plus the carousel (merry-go-round) that has very special horses three-rows deep.

Raccoon Lagoon is a rides and amusement area just for little tykes. They say it is the biggest area of its kind in the whole United States. Little kids will love it here.

Mister Rogers' Neighborhood of Make Believe is terrific. It is named after the same Mister Rogers who you see on television. He lived very near the area when he was growing up in Latrobe. Because Mister Rogers always came to Idlewild, he says he remembers having such a good time in the park. So in his Neighborhood of Make Believe, Mister Rogers says you will meet King Friday XIII, Cornflake S. Pecially, Daniel Striped Tiger, Lady Elaine Fairchilde and many other characters. There is also a real trolley that you can ride.

Water Blasters, look out! Idlewild has the H_2OHHH Zone for you. Water slides for everyone are everywhere at the big blue pool of water. There are speed slides, shotgun slides and body flumes. There is a section for kiddies.

Rafters Run is a crazy adventure. You and a friend can ride a raft down a strange looking tube with odd twists and turns before the raft and you shoot into the waiting water.

Shaded picnic tables and pavilions are found all over the pretty park. There are lots of games, oodles of food and beverage concessions, souvenir and gift shops. Idlewild Park even has its own group of entertainers who perform during the evenings. Besides family fun, Idlewild has hosted countless groups from schools, churches and so forth. So if you can't make it to Idlewild Park this season, plan to come next spring. (Labor Day is last of 1991 season.) Call this telephone number: (412) 238-3666.

Idlewild Park is along Route 30, just a bit west of Ligonier. Route 30 connects at various points to the Pennsylvania Turnpike, Route 219 and 119 and others. Your parents can locate it on a road map.

In the Story Book Forest at Idlewild Park, children meet fairytale friends such as the Crooked Man in the Crooked House.

That Cow's Full Of Candy

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — How many M&M's could you fill in a cow if you could fill a cow with M&M's?

Simple. You multiply the number of M&M's in a one-pound bag by the number of pounds of M&M put in the cow (1,800 pounds).

What cow, you ask?

Well, the 200-pound plastic life-sized cow at the Elizabethtown Fair last week.

Each day, visitors to the fair had a chance to see the cow on display. The bovine was filled to the brim with the candies by M&M/MARS Co., based in Elizabethtown.

"What a lot of people don't realize is that candy manufacturers are the third largest users of milk products," said Darci Harris, M&M fair coordinator in charge of special projects.

Harris was at the fair last week to answer questions about the candies and the important part milk places in manufacturing M&M's.

The plastic on the seven-foot high, five-foot wide, transparent cow was manufactured by Cardinal Plastics in California.

According to M&M/MARS, the candies used to construct the cow confection contain milk solids from more than 1,200 pounds of fluid milk.

To produce 1 million pieces of M&M's, the manufacturer requires milk solids from more than 2,500 pounds of fluid milk.

The candies were assembled and packaged in Hackettstown, N.J. The company brought "several" thirty-pound bags of the candy to the fair, said Harris.

Each day, said Harris, about 25-30 people guess the correct amount, or are at least "in range," she said. From about 100 finalists, five are chosen.

This was the first time the cow appeared at the fair, although M&M/MARS displayed the cow at the New York State Fair and the Delmar Farm Festival.

The cow may also appear at the Harrisburg Farm Show in January next year, according to Harris.

M&M Mars Company in Elizabethtown brought this cow to the Elizabethtown Fair last week to promote the use of milk in candy.

Jason Brown, 9, is trying to figure out how many M&Ms are in the cow. The fourth grader from Grandville Elementary in Mount Joy thinks it's about 1,000,502. His kindergarten brother insists it's 10,000,000.

Children have terrific fun at the Idlewild Park where they can visit story book friends.

Somerset Fair Queen Begins Reign

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — Regardless of any existing drought conditions here, depend on it, the advent of the Somerset County Fair the third week every August will attract rain as surely as bears can find honey. So it was that the ominous blackening of the overhead clouds following the opening Vesper Service, just prior to the fair queen contest, held little surprise for the fair directors. They sensibly relocated the grandstand event to the indoor show arena before the inevitable droplets could target the gathered crowd of guests.

Lucinda Lape, 18, of Friedens, looking elegant in an emerald green fitted gown with a back slit, and matching jewels hanging just below her ears, was chosen by three judges to reign as the queen over this year's Somerset County Fair. She was crowned by outgoing queen Wendy Will of Berlin.

First runner-up to the new queen was Jodell Rhoads, 17, of Berlin. The remaining contestants were Mary Ann Pyle, 19, of Rockwood; Aimee Shipley, 17, of Glencoe; and Julia Ann Keafer, 17, Somerset.

Lape is enrolled in elementary education at Eastern Mennonite College, Harrisonburg, VA. A talented musician, she has compiled an impressive list of vocal and instrumental achievements in high school. During her years in 4-H, Lape was a Nevada Exchange delegate in addition to other 4-H activities which often found her competing at the state level.

Dale and Bonnie Lape are her parents.

Now entering her senior high school year, Jodell Rhoads is one of Somerset County's top 4-H seamstresses. This year, her woolen two-piece outfit of basic red was judged to be the "Best of Show," at the county fair. She has also earned recognition for her work on other garments.

Harry and Virginia Rhoads are Jodell's parents.

Invited from neighboring counties to perform the judging honors were the husband and wife team of Tom and Cathy Wakefield, and Nancy McAfoose.

The Wakefields from Bedford own a dairy farm which, the husband operates while the wife teaches home economics at the Tussey Mountain School District. Wakefield also is a director for the Bedford County Fair.

McAfoose hails from Indiana and is the historian for the Indiana County Fair.

Mother and daughter, Jean and Jill Romesberg from the county, coordinated the fair queen contest that was conducted by master of ceremonies James Bochy, the retired director of the Somerset County Extension Service.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

School days are here again. How well I remember the days when I had several children in elementrary school.

The days before school started were quite busy as we tried to find the time to go shopping for shirts, trousers, dresses and shoes. And, trying to find the money was no easy job either. When I took three of them to the store, I had to take the baby along too and keep her satisfied. It was a stressful situation, but, somehow we accomplished it.

Just this past week, I emptied a bureau drawer in which I kept some special children's clothes. There were shirts and dresses that I associated with a particular child. One boy had a shirt with all kinds of cars printed on it. There was a pink dress with embroidered roses on it that one child wore when she took her first steps. A pair of blue baby shoes was still in its original box. I think that I'll mail them to my daughter in Seattle her baby son.

There are now six piles of clothes waiting for our children to pick up sometime. Of course, there were some that I knew they would not want and I couldn't part with all of them. There was a soft receiving blanket, a white bonnet with ribbons and yellow socks with gold trim that I'll keep. It is so easy for me to keep too many things but they do help to refresh my memory of days past.

I still have the first three dresses that I bought for our oldest daughter to start school. It was the first dresses that I ever bought for her as previously she had clothes given to her. She was so excited, and, when I took her to the bus stop, one mile from our home, she jumped out of the car and skipped away. She never looked back as I sat there trying to hold back the tears. It has been the story of her life- onward and upward.

Marian canned 126-quarts peaches from the orchard that her husband tends on one of the four farms the Snyders own in Northumberland County.

Who Said Workaholics Don't Have Any Fun?

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

REBUCK (NORTHUMBERLAND CO.) — Whoever said that workaholics don't have any fun, does not know Marian Snyder.

"My work is my fun," she insists. From sun up to sun down, Marian is busy working on the farm or canning peaches or crocheting prize-winning tablecloths or a million other things that she finds to do.

"She can't sit and relax. She must always be doing something," her husband, Ed, said. "Even when we go on vacation, she takes her work along."

This week, the Snyders are vacationing in Canada, but you can bet on it that Marian will be lap quilting the whole way.

The Snyders own four farms and grain-farm 700 acres in Northumberland County. The house they live in is the same on that Ed was born in. It's also the oldest log house in the picturesque valley in which they live.

When Ed and his wife took over the family farm, they worked hard and saved until they were able to put up the first two of four grain bins. Now they have storage bins for more than 40,000 bushels of grain. As their farming business prospers, the Snyders added another farm until they owned four farms. Although they added more property, they always stayed living on the home place because Ed said, "I was born here. I want to die here."

In 1983, the Snyders planted fruit trees on some of their acreage. Ed said that he planted the orchard for when he retires. Now he has 60 apple trees, 45 peach and 40 nectarine trees. He found that caring for the orchard is hard work.

"It isn't a retirement job," Ed admits, "but I guess I'll keep it. You've got to spray every week, prune, gather sticks and pick fruit."

Since this year was extremely dry, Ed also needed to haul truckloads of water in a hugh tank to water the trees.

"If you spray the water, you lose 80 percent of it so we watered the base each tree," Marian said.

All fruit is sold by word of mouth except what Marian cans. Before the middle of August, she had canned 126 quarts of peaches — not only for Ed and her to enjoy but also for friends who ask her to can for them. She also cans applesauce, apple pie filling, and nectarines. She freezes string beans, peas and red beets.

While some persons might consider freezing and canning hard work — not Marian. She likes to sit on her porch and peel fruit for hours while admiring the hummingbirds and other birds that eat from a nearby feeder. Her seat also allows her to admire a bountiful variety of flowers planted around the property.

Canning season will soon end. Then Marian's days will be even busier. During the grain harvest season, she runs the grain dryer, drives the empty trucks to the field, and brings loaded trucks back to fill the auger. She converses with her husband by CB while driving the trucks and combines.

"I don't get to drive much tractor anymore, because friends who help out almost fight to drive the tractors," she said.

The Snyders' son, Jeffrey, is in partnership with his parents. Like many Pennsylvania farmers, the Snyder's crops have suffered greatly this year. In addition, the midwest, which sets the prices for grain, had a good year. That means prices are down in the East.

"Grain dropped 30 cents a bushel in one day," Marian said. "It looks like we will have a $100,000 to $125,000 loss this year."

Marian surmises that she'll need to get a paying job. But she'd have a hard time fitting it into her schedule. Not only does she have her own work to do but also both she and her husband drive school bus.

(Turn to Page B15)

Although Ed complains that his wife is a workaholic who can't sit and do nothing, Ed does take much time to relax either. He farms 700 acres in addition to running a grain business and the orchard that he planted for retirement. Here, he shows off a top-quality peach that he picks from his orchard.

Capacity and reliability for on-time harvesting

When it comes to harvesting valuable forages, you need capacity and reliability to get the crop off fast. New Holland forage harvesters give you on-time harvesting with built-in features to improve reliability, ease maintenance and lower operating costs.

Leader in its class

Put a Model 718 in corn or haylage and you'll see why it's the most popular medium-duty harvester in its class. This cut-and-throw designed harvester offers maximum efficiency. A heavy-duty 540-rpm PTO handles up to 90 horsepower. The 12-knife cutterhead delivers a fine uniform chop.

Powerful performance

The heavy-duty Model 790 gives you smooth and efficient harvesting, thanks to the 12 cutterhead knives set at a steeper rake angle and a two-speed blower. The heavy-duty driveline handles up to 150 horsepower.

Energy-saving efficiency

The Model 900 is designed to meet the needs of today's big crop producers. The 1,000-rpm drive-line is rated at 190-PTO or 210-tractor horsepower. You get smooth feeding and controlled chopping because of a design that lests the feedrolls pivot up and toward the cutterhead as a unit for ideal length of cut.

Peace of mind protection.

Optional Metalert® II, available on the "790" and "900", looks for trouble before it happens. You get a five-year guarantee against cutterhead damage caused by ferrous metal. More important, it keeps nasty bits of scrap metal out of livestock feed.

Scenes From Elizabethtown Fair

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Folks like Wilbur and Ruth Witman make Elizabethtown Fair the place to be from August 20 through 24.

The Witmans of Elizabethtown entered five items in the vegetable and fruit competition. And, folks like Lester and Lois Martin of the same town, and Betty and Jerre Groff of Manheim come to admire the prize-winning displays.

The Witmans are produce hobby growers. They have only two peach trees, one Sun High and one Red Haven, and, they planted 32 pounds of potatoes, but that was enough to gather perfect peaches and potatoes that took first place ribbons at the county fair.

Drought conditions this year did not affect the quality and size of the vegetables, although Witman did water them occasionally.

"I fell off the ladder while picking peaches on Saturday night," Witman said. On Monday, he injuried his hand while spearing tobacco.

Fortunately, he did not have serious injuries and the blue ribbons made his efforts worthwhile. His wife also entered peaches, for which she received fourth place. Ruth also received fourth place for a fan fern that she entered in houseplant competition.

Vegetable and fruit competition isn't just an older generation hobby. Three cousins got an early start by claiming the first three placings in the pumpkin category.

Trevor Reider, 9, James, Reider, 7, and Billy Lewis, 8, got ribbons for their pumpkins that range in weight from 72 to 75 pounds.

Their grandfather, John Reider of Elizabethtown, plants the pumpkin seeds indoors, and the cousins help transplant them and care for the pumpkins. When fair time arrives, the cousins draw straws to decide who gets to show which pumpkin. The prize money is split with the cousins.

The boys attributed the growth of their pumpkins to watering them with manure water. Each year, they save the seeds to start next year's crop.

Trevor and James are the sons of Jack and Mariann Reider of E-town. Billy is the son of William and Sally Lewis of E-town.

The livestock competition and the champion sale of animals drew a large crowd on Thursday night. Janelle Wivell earned the fair's highest award when her supreme champion Holstein was named supreme of the Fair. The 17-year-old raised the cow at her dad's (Joe) farm in Columbia. The cow daily produces 100 pounds of milk.

Highlights of the champion sale included Sarah Boyd's 234-pound grand champion hog that sold for $2.40 per pound to Hatfield Quality Meats. Groff's Meat of E-town purchased the reserve champion hog for $2.20 per pound from Travis Donough, the 125-pound reserve champion market lamb for $1.25 per pound from Garth Campbell, and the 1,355-pound grand champion steer for $1.10 per pound from Peter Hoffines.

Lebanon Valley National Bank purchased Lisa Reiff's 127-pound grand champion market lamb for $3 per pound, and Walter Heistand paid $1.06 per pound for the reserve champion steer owned by Jason Stoltzfus.

Wilbur and Ruth Witman (right) of E-town show their prize winning peaches to Lester and Lois Martin, E-town.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

We're getting ready to market a new service.

Weathermaking.

The way we make weather changes occur here is to leave the farm.

It worked effectively last year. One snatched weekend at the beach -- out of the entire summer of 1990 -- resulted in one of the worst windstorms to ever sweep through our little section of York County.

Just recently we have begun to put back together the barn flattened by what we figured was a tornado, but what weather experts called "straight line winds." And the downed tree limbs, which filled the yard around the house, served their final duty as woodstove kindling and fuel for house warmth through last winter's cold.

The one day through this entire summer that we stole a few hours away for our local Holstein cattle show it rained buckets at the fairgrounds -- though the ground around the farm got a mere sprinkling.

So it seemed only proper and fitting that, as we headed for the Delaware coast for a few days away with the kids, prior to their return to college classes far and near, a major weather event would be bearing down.

Bob. Hurricane Bob.

Actually, we had reached the point in this season of heat and crop-devastating-drought where it seemed only some massive system -- like a hurricane -- would alter the entrenched dry-weather pattern. Never mind that the first reports of one forming came as we made preparations and gathered provisions for this brief getaway of several families and generations joined by blood, marriage, and friendship.

Threatening weather seemed far distant as we headed southeast through a hot, sultry afternoon. But gradually, fat thunderclouds slid over the horizon, trailing darker, more ominous, bluish-gray thickness.

Within an hour from the seaside house, so generously shared by our sister and brother-in-law, traffic backups jammed the opposite, northward-bound highway lanes.

Was everyone fleeing the beaches? We hit the car radio button for local weather reports. Bob was headed straight up the coast. And two generations of family were already settled in at the beach house.

"What hurricane?" they collectively asked on our arrival. So busy had they been with "beach stuff" and playing games, no one had turned on a radio or picked up a newspaper.

Though clouds hung heavy over the sand and moderate waves, the still, humid air belied the hurricane warnings issued every few minutes on the weather radio. With the storm's center predicted to pass a hundred miles farther east over the Atlantic, no one on the south Delaware shore seemed too concerned. Flashlights, batteries, water, food and gas, however, were reportedly selling like hotcakes.

A slow drizzle starting near midnight hinted at the fulfillment of the weathermen's warnings. Our cars had gas, we had run a small supply of fresh water -- and all we could do was go to sleep and wait it out.

By dawn, Bob had noisily arrived. Gusts of wind whistled between the sturdy houses and through beach pines. Waves crashed, if you could hear them over the wind. Mists of moisture soaked porches and poked through cracks of windows left up for fresh air.

And as quickly as he came, Bob blew off, leaving counter-clockwise swirling cloud patterns over the coast that even before lunch parted to bright sunshine. But ahead of and behind him, Bob churned the weather enough back at home to give us more rain than had fallen in the past three months and coax touches of green from our barren, brown pastures and lawns.

Bob brought powerful waves, closed beaches for a day, stirred rain at home and detoured us from the surf to snagging crabs for supper with chicken necks dangled on lines from a back bay floating pier. While he wreaked considerable havoc elsewhere, Bob left us with only memories of a little extra seaside excitement and much-needed moisture.

Next time we need summer rain, I'll just volunteer to go to the beach.

It's a tough job -- but I think I'm up to it.

Workaholics

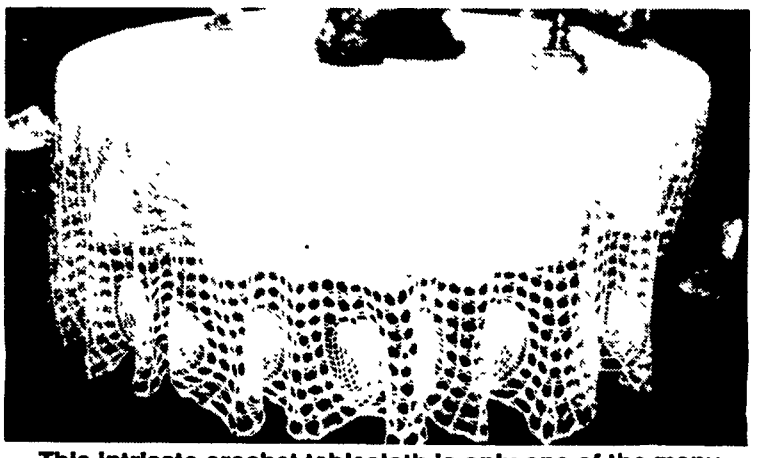
They have been driving bus for 35 years.

When the farm work isn't pressing, Marian works on many different projects. It seems impossible to name a craft that Marian doesn't do expertly. Among them, she crochets intricate tablecloths, counted crosstitch, knits, macrames lawn chairs, canes chairs, and makes ceramics.

In the past, she has won top prizes at Bloomsburg Fairs, but in recent years she does not take the time to enter her projects. Some skills she has learned from her mother and mother-in-law, but much of her expertise has been picked up by studying instructions from Penn State's at-home courses.

Marian is an adament supporter of Penn State's courses. "Working is fun. I wouldn't want to sit and do nothing," she said.



This intricate crochet tablecloth is only one of the many projects that Marian Snyder made that took first prize at the Bloomsburg Fair.

Beef Scores In School Lunches

CHICAGO, IL — The beef industry scored an A+ for a pilot program that earlier this year tested heart-healthy school lunches in four Minnesota public school districts.

The LUNCHPOWER! program, designed to lower the fat and sodium in school lunches, was tested in 34 school cafeterias from January through May. LUNCHPOWER! was developed by nutrition experts at the University of Minnesota School of Public Health, the Minnesota Department of Education, four pilot school districts and program funders, including the Beef Industry Council (BIC) of the Meat Board and the Minnesota Beef Council.

"The LUNCHPOWER! program uses a new ground beef rinsing technique in which the ground beef is cooked and drained initially," says Jane Lindeman, BIC coordinator of foodservice programs. "Hot tap water is poured over the top of the beef, and it is drained again. This procedure is excellent for quantity cooking and lowers the fat significantly."

The program outlines steps to lower the fat and sodium in school recipes and vendor products. LUNCHPOWER! menus feature ground beef in lower-fat versions of lunchroom favorites such as chili, lasagna and sloppy joes.

A LUNCHPOWER! program manual and a rinsing video will be distributed to key foodservice directors in October, 1991.

Japan Eats U.S. Pork

DENVER, Co. — Japanese consumers are having their pork and eating it too. A Tokyo daily recently reported that increased volumes of imported chilled pork have been responsible for keeping Japanese summer pork prices in check.

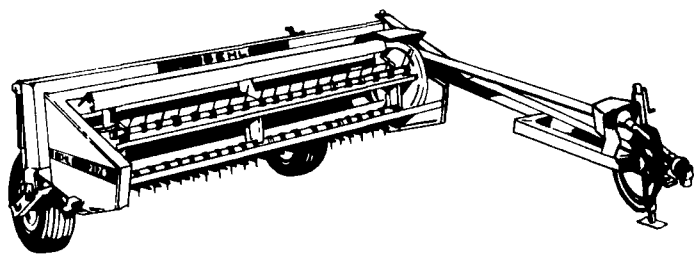
"A shortage of market pigs in July and August, combined with the popularity of summer barbecues in Japan usually sends prices soaring during this time of year," said Toshi Tanaka, director of the U.S. Meat Export Federation's Tokyo office.

Japanese chilled pork imports come primarily from Taiwan and the U.S., with some from Denmark. Last year, U.S. chilled pork accounted for 30.7 percent of all pork exports to Japan, while Taiwan, exported only 15.7 percent of its pork as chilled product.

"Recently, U.S. packers have been employing technonogy and streamlining slaughter techniques to increase the shelf life of U.S. chilled pork, enabling the U.S. industry to compete with countries whose shipping time is far less," said Tanaka.

"U.S. pork producers have another advantage," said Tanaka. Unlike Taiwan producers, who must sell full sets (all cuts from a single carcass), U.S. exporters have the flexibility to sell specific cuts. The Japanese preference for loins, which accounted for 67 percent of all imported pork in 1990, is an opportunity for the U.S. industry."

GEHL®



Thoroughly Conditioned

The Gehl 2140/2170 mower conditioners will thoroughly condition your hay. These pull-type mower conditioners are built for fast cutting, fast drying and worry-free performance. The wide, intermeshing rubber rolls with intermittent ribs give you 35% more working edges than continuous-ribbed rolls, for more thorough conditioning. That means shorter drying time with less leaf damage. See your Gehl dealer today on how the 2140, with a 7 ft. cutting width, and the 2170 with a 9 ft. 3 in. cutting width, will fit into your haymaking operation.

Two models are available; the 2240 and 12'3" cutting width, and the 2270 with 14'3" cutting width. Both models feature wide, 109-inch rubber conditioning rolls with intermittent tread design to deliver thorough, uniform conditioning. These machines pivot at the center of the frame for easy header positioning, reducing cutting time and lowering fuel costs. And total hydraulic drive means smooth operation and low maintenance. Put a Gehl swing frame mower conditioner to work for you today!

Foodtastic Journey Exhibit

After a long busy day at the office Mayor Wilson W. Good of Philadelphia still had enough energy to drop by the FOODTASTIC JOURNEY exhibit for a visit with the life-size dairy cow.

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks Co.) — What better way for a child to understand how foods come from the farm to their kitchen table than experiencing it visually? Dairy Council, Inc. in conjunction with the Please Touch Museum, Philadelphia, has created, FOODTASTIC JOURNEY, an exhibit which takes children from the farm to grocery and finally, home.

FOODTASTIC JOURNEY, which opened in July, covers, 1,070 square feet. Children are encouraged to explore the exhibit which is divided into three sections: the farm, the grocery and the home kitchen. Items from the food groups are color coded throughout the exhibit to link the three sections together as well as reinforce the food grouping concept. Handouts, videos and other materials help to teach children this important journey. Nearly 154,000 people visit the Please Touch museum annually.

Coordinated by Brenda Ripoli, Dairy Council's Director of Nutrition Education Programs, this project will have additional components added. According to Ripoli Dairy Council plans to offer future inservice training to complement the permanent exhibit.

Dairy Council, Inc. is a nonprofit nutrition education organization funded by the dairy farmers in the tri-state area of southeastern and south central Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and the state of Delaware.

Located in the Dairy Products Building at the New York State fairgrounds, 600 pounds of butter has been crafted into an old-fashioned ice cream cart. The sculpture also depicts a young lad enjoying his double-dip cone and a little girl anxiously awaiting hers.

Raymond Mackintosh of Ontario, Canada is the creator and designer of the sculpture. He and his wife, Louise, spent six days inside the 35-degree refrigerated glass case sculpting the butter. The temperature must be nearly freezing so the butter is neither too runny, nor too brittle to shape. The sculptor molds butter over a wire framework which gives shape to the figures.

Butter donors include American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Dairylea Cooperative and Eastern Milk Producers. The butter is donated to charity after the Fair.

Including Clugston, 16 of these scholars received scholarships to attend the National Conference.

The group did an outstanding job as Pennsylvania representatives," says Crystal Smithmyer, PCC Executive Director. "They definitely stood out among the hundreds of youth present. We are proud of all of them, and especially pleased by Jacy's honor. It was well deserved."

National Council of Farmer Cooperatives Youth Ambassador Jacy Clugston is congratulated by John and Susan Pitzer of Agway Energy Products.

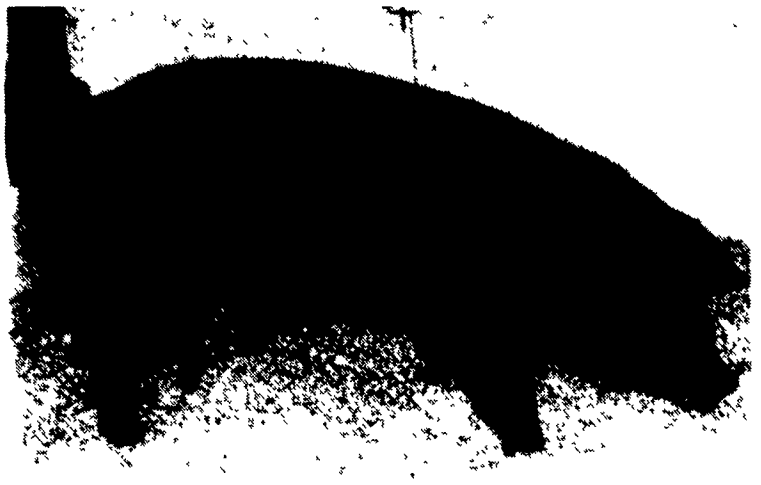
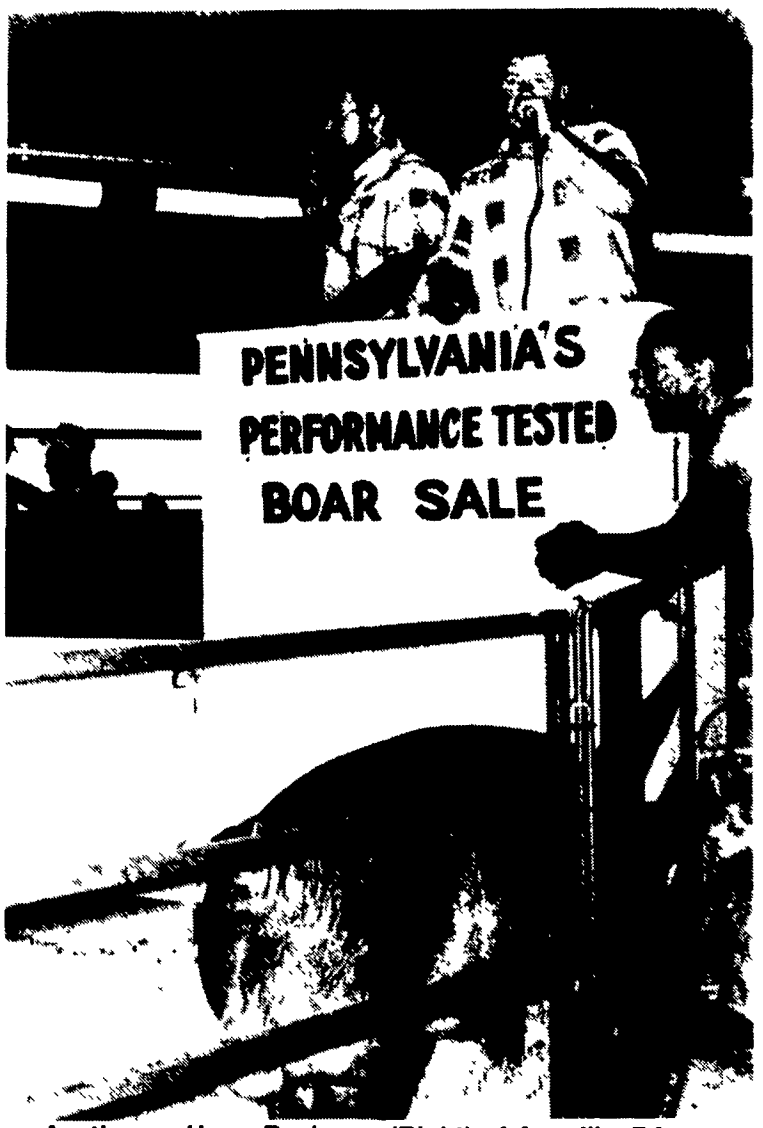
Duroc Boars High Sellers



Of the 44 boars sold at Pennsylvania's 14th Performance Tested Boar Sale, Penn State's group of Duroc boars scored the highest (169 points) when examined for weight gain, back fat, and feed efficiency. This Duroc boar sold for $900.



Auctioneer Harry Bachman (Right) of Annville, PA conducts the sale at Pennsylvania's 14th Performance Tested Boar Sale at Penn State's Ag Arena while Glenn Eberly, (Left), of the Meat Evaluation Center announces the boars and identifies the buyers and sellers.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Penn State's Ag Arena, adjacent to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Evaluation Center, was the site for Pennsylvania's 14th Performance Tested Boar Sale held recently

The sale was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture in cooperation with Penn State and the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council.

Buyers, industry representatives, and interested persons gathered aaround as 44 boars from 18 breeders were auctioned in numerical order according to index. To index a boar or test group, the Evaluation Center examines daily weight gain, feed efficiency, and backfat. As a point of reference, an average boar will index 100 points. A boar indexing 120 points is considered 20 percent better than average.

Of all the boars sold, Penn State's Duroc test group averaged the highest at 169 points. The highest indexing boar within that group indexed 176 points.

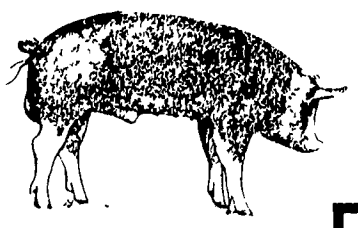
As the auctioning began, Pennsylvania State University's highest indexing Duroc sold for $900 while the group's second highest sold for $925, the high for the day.

The Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council president Kent Strock commented on the possibility of a second boar performance test, possibly in February.

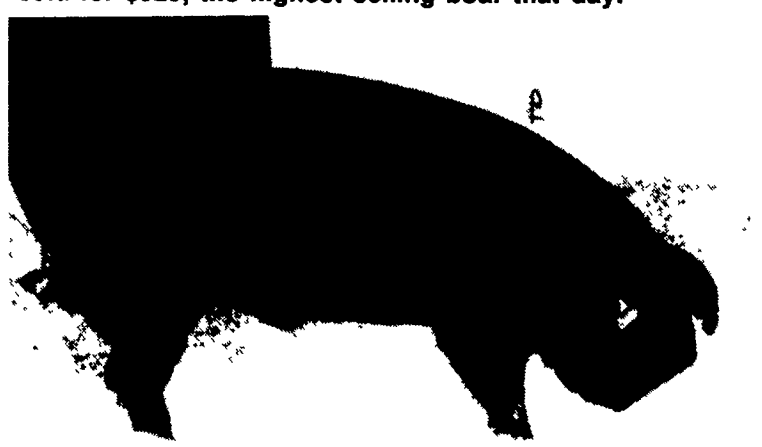
"A questionnaire sent out indicated that breeders would support a second boar sale. Another boar sale would be good for the industrey," he said.

Strock also mentioned that the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council will sponsor the Keystone Pork Congress to be held in February at the Penn Harris in Harrisburg.

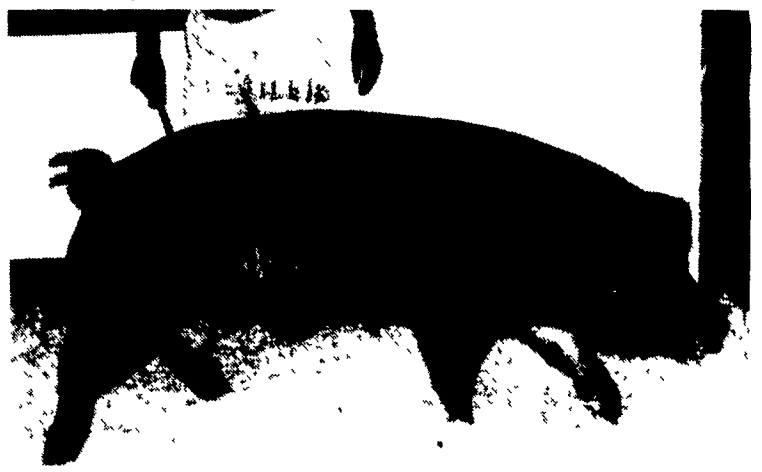
The Pork Congress serves as a trade show, educational event, and a fund raiser for the State Pork Producers Council.



Penn State's second highest indexing boar (172 points) sold for $925, the highest selling boar that day.



One of four Penn State Boars tested, this boar's index was 164 points and sold for $875.



Clyde McConaughey of Smicksburg. PA sold his Duroc boar for $600.

BARN PAINTING
Aim For The Best - In Coating Film Thickness

To do it right use the finest kind of bristle brush evening out the coating into a film thickness that does not peel in normal moisture stress (found on most barn siding from outside and inside by livestock or stored animal feed)

1. PREPARATION. Peeling old coatings (improperly brushed) needs to be removed The best method is simply water blasting or power washing! High volume of water - medium pressure is best! Done professionally or do it yourself, especially on the easy to reach areas This is resurfacing!!!
2. BEST NEW START ON RESURFACED WOOD SIDING After spraying on this kind of barn paint or stain, take time to pay attention to brush out in all directions to create a film thickness that will prevent future peeling & resurfacing costs & effort This film will let excess moisture breathe through it Depending on the amount of weather wear it can be recoated lightly in 10-15 years Southern exposures usually wear faster.

HATCHING CHICKS IN A SCHOOL CLASSROOM INCUBATOR

Herbert C. Jordan
Associate Professor
Poultry Science

More than 1,000 school teachers in Pennsylvania are trained by 4-H agents each year in the art of incubating and hatching white chicken eggs.

If you teach children between the ages of 8 and 18 years, you may call your local county cooperative extension 4-H agent and ask to discover the method by which students may enroll in 4-H embryology in your classroom.

This will allow you to hatch white eggs in the classroom in a small incubator. Students share the tasks of turning the eggs and monitoring and controlling the system.

Incubation is an art supported by a science that requires intuition, self discipline, reasoning, husbandry, much common sense, and technical information on egg handling, environmental needs of the embryo, and early care of chicks.

About 80,000 people in Pennsylvania care for or brood day-old chicks each year. Most of these people have a small backyard flock, while some brood many thousand chicks at once on a commercial farm.

Students learning the hands-on task of incubating eggs in a classroom incubator have brought school advisors many compliments.

Parents, children, teachers, school administrators, and wardens at teenage prisons all agree that when children incubate eggs and hatch chicks, many children change their behavior in a more constructive way. They study and cooperate more and behave like normal students.

Learning to care for a fragile young life appears to be much needed by today's students. Students in this project learn to prevent early death of young chicks.

4-H embryology enrolls about 41,000 members annually in Pennsylvania. Four hundred other 4-H members are enrolled in at least one of the following poultry projects: capon, backyard poultry, flock laying, broiler-roaster, turkey, or egg marketing. Fifteen hundred other 4-H members are enrolled in the pet (with rabbit) or rabbit 4-H projects.

Students who complete one of these projects learn responsibility and self discipline in the care of animals. We have room in 4-H for more members and advisors.

Low Milk Prices Mean Higher Milk Production?

ROBERT YONKERS
Extension Agricultural Economist

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — For years, some in the dairy industry have claimed that lower milk prices lead to higher milk production.

This directly contradicts the economic theory known as the law of supply.

However, during most of the 1980s, milk prices were declining and milk production did grow. Is there some other relationship which could explain this difference between theory and observation?

One explanation for this is provided by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's data on costs of producing milk, which also tended to decline during most of the 1980s. Perhaps farm operators based their production decisions more on the margin between prices and costs than on prices alone.

The past year has been a good test for the law of supply with respect to milk production, as milk prices have fallen by more than 20 percent while costs of producing have fallen much less.

The result was a slowing in the growth of milk production through April, and a decline in May and June compared to last year.

Milk production in the 21 leading states was slightly lower in May 1991, than May of last year. It was also .4 percent lower in June than a year ago.

The lesson from this for the dairy industry is that lower milk prices can lead to lower milk production if other factors, especially costs of production remain relatively stable.

BRILLION, Wis. — Brillion's new Landcommander front disc gang has adjustable working depths and cutting angles. The discs are spaced 15 inches to cut through the residue and allow trash to flow through the machine.

Take Command Of Fall Tillage

BRILLION, Wis. — Brillion's new Landcommander gives you total command over problems of compaction, soil erosion, residue management, and rough fields.

The front disc gang has adjustable working depths and cutting angles. The discs are spaced 15 inches to cut through the residue and allow trash to flow through the machine.

Durable auto-reset shanks follow the disc gang, penetrating the soil from 8 to 20 inches deep. This helps eliminate compaction and incorporate the residue into the soil. A 39- inch underframe clearance allows the Landcommander to work heavy residue without plugging.

"Unique to the Landcommander is the rear disc gang," said Carl Miller, sales manager. "This gang helps control the amount of residue on the surface to meet conservation compliance needs. The 7.5 inch-spaced discs can bury the residue and break up clods for a leveler field. Or to prevent soil erosion, our customers can raise the gang to leave residue on the surface."

Working depths and cutting angles in the disc gangs are easily adjustable. The shanks automatically reset for non-stop farming. And it features a unique self-leveling hitch which allows the unit to remain level working in the field and in transport.

"Our customers can depend on the strengrth and the durability of the Landcommander for long wear and quality performance," said Miller. "It provides versatile operation for all conservation needs."

The new VOLUMAXX high-capacity ring-drive silo unloaders include the following beneficial improvements that increase capacity and performance: new Hi-Lift legs allow the unloader to be raised 15" higher in the silo during filling for side-style distributor systems, new roughage auger with exclusive 16° forward pitch flighting improves auger performance and efficiency, and a new high-capacity blower/ impeller features stainless steel in all high-wear areas, including reversible stainless steel paddles.

Ring-Drive Silo Unloader Gets Increased Capacity

FORT ATKINSON, Wis. — J-STAR Industries, Inc., manufacturers of Jamesway Farmstead Equipment, recently unveiled to dealers the laterst in their long line of full ring-drive silo unloaders.

At special meetings across the Corn Belt and at major dairy and farm shows in the upper Midwest and Northeast, the new unloaders were received with excitement and enthusiasm.

Instead of trying to increase performance by one breakthrough, the company's engineers went looking for every conceivable way in which the Jamesway "Real Ring-Drive" concept and design could be beefed up, augmented or made more efficient and effective. The results were impressive.

The new VOLUMAXX high-capacity ring-drive silo unloaders include the following beneficial improvements that increase capacity and performance:

- New Hi-Lift legs allow the unloader to be raised 15 inches higher in the silo during filling for side-style distributor system. Result: An increase in silo capacity.
- New roughage auger with exclusive 16° forward pitch flighting improves auger performance and efficiency. Result: Faster unloading with less power requirements and less auger wear.
- A new high-capacity blower/ impeller features stainless steel in all high-wear areas, including reversible stainless steel paddles, a 3/16-inch stainless steel impeller band and stainless steel discharge throat V-band. Result: Faster unloading, longer life, and fewer maintenance problems.
- A new stainless steel auger shroud cover stands up to the corrosive silage acids and the tough, high-moisture environment of a silo.

In addition to these improvements, new VOLUMAXX is also available with exclusive Jamesway POWERMAXX Broad Pan Power Distribution. In a nutshell, POWERMAXX increases silo capacity by providing a more tight, consistent, even pack through proper distribution. Result: More uniform nutrition, more uniform animal performance and fewer off-feed problems.

For those who own previous Jamesway ring-drive unloader model, the company offers a VOLUMAXX Renew Kit and a High-Lift Leg Adapter Kit. The Renew Kit and leg adapter can update older machines to 1992 VOLUMAXX performance standards.

Details and illustrations covering the features and benefits of the new VOLUMAXX unloaders and POWERMAXX Distributuion are outlined in a comprehensive 12-page full-color brochure available from all Jamesway dealers. Another brochure outlines more of the details about POWERMAXX distribution including university research.

Hoover Expands Product Lines

EPHRATA, Lancaster Co. — An expanding local community has increasing demands on agricultural businesses, according to Henry Hoover, owner of Henry B. Hoover Inc. store located in Ephrata.

In order "to better meet the needs of people in different ways," Hoover said he built a 5,200 square foot addition to display the business's diversified line of products.

On Friday, September 6, 1991, from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., Hoover is holding an open house to officially announce he is the first authorized distributor in Pennsylvania for Moorman Manufacturing Company, and to better acquaint customers with the expanded line of products.

A single hog product, first made and marketed in 1885 by Kentucky farmer Thomas Robinson Moorman, grew into Moorman Manufacturing Company, which now markets more than 200 feed products and livestock equipment. Moorman Manufacturing Company's feed division is the largest American-owned, privately held, feed company in the country, serving independent livestock producers. The home office is in Quincy, Ill. MoorMan's® markets in 38 states, and manufactures at 12 locations (including facilities in California, Texas, Illinois, Georgia, Iowa, Indiana, Nebraska and Idaho).

This is not the first expansion for the Hoover business, located north of Ephrata on Rt. 322. The history of the store has been to expand, ever since Henry Hoover Sr. first started selling feed to local farmers during the 1930s.

In the 1940s, a warehouse and office were built in town along railroad tracks so boxcars could be unloaded right next to the warehouse. Hoover built the present store, warehouse, and offices in the past 10 years. Also, a customized fertilizer blend plant was added, at the rear of the property.

Growth continued in 1980 with a 6,000 square foot warehouse built to the west end of the building.

Animal Health Suppliers and refreshments are to be available during the open house and employees will be on hand to answer questions. Hoover said he is also going to have special pricing on certain items during the open house.

DEKALB Builds Huge Laboratory

STONINGTON, Conn. — DEKALB Plant Genetics has begun construction on a new 41,000-square foot laboratory, office, and greenhouse facility here. It will replace the current complex in Groton, Conn. which is used for DEKALB's biotechnology program.

The $6 million facility is scheduled for completion in Sept. 1992. It will be located in Maritime Park, an industrial complex.

"This represents our continued commitment to biotechnology and its importance to our products," said Dr. Tom Rice, DEKALB's president. "The new facility will allow us to double the size of our current program."

Most of the current staff will relocate from facilities shared with Pfizer, Inc. In addition, the company will be hiring more scientists and technicians. The research center will employ about 60 people.

Rice said DEKALB examined several sites across the country before choosing Stonington. Key considerations in making the selection included the area's "attractive living environment and access to good transportation and hotel facilities" - important in attracting staff, he said.

The DEKALB president also praised the community for its cooperation in getting the project approved.

"The community was very enthusiastic about having us locate there," Rice said. "The people have supported our effort wholeheartedly. We're very pleased to be moving to Stonington."

At the facility, DEKALB researchers will use the latest technology to make genetic improvements in corn.

"We will continue to look for ways to improve the efficiency of the way we develop products and also to broaden the possibilities for products," said Dr. Kitty Mackey, director of discovery reseach. "With the technology now available, we could potentially develop products more quickly. It also allows us to develop products that are impossible using conventional technology."

Last year, DEKALB was the first major seed company to use gene transfer technology that allows scientists to incorporate specific traits into a corn plant. Using a "gene gun," scientists actually shot genetic material into a cell.

With this new technology and current breeding methods, researchers hope to develop corn hybrids that will include traits that do not currently exist, said Rice. Those traits include resistance to herbicides, diseases, and insects.

"If all goes according to plan, we should have a commercial product by the end of the decade," he said.

Poultry Farmers Can Learn To Manage Nutrients

John H. Schwartz
Lancaster County
Extension
Poultry Agent

Farming is the art of combining several different enterprises to form a farm business. These enterprises are selected based on individual preferences, resources available, soils, profit potential, and supportive services.

One of the key components that need to be managed among enterprises is nutrients. Nutrient management has been receiving a lot of attention lately as a way to improve water quality and increase profitability.

Nutrient management is applying only the amount of plant nutrients required by the crop being produced. Legislation working its way through Harrisburg is going to require farmers to develop nutrient management plans for their farms. These nutrient management plans will help us learn the lessons that our grand fathers knew and practiced.

The lessons are the value of manure as a plant nutrient, the importance of cover crops, and crop rotations. By combining the art of farming practiced by our grandfathers with today's knowledge of science, we will be able to develop sound nutrient management plans.

There are several key components to nutrient management planning. These are recognizing that animal manure contain plant nutrients, there is a high degree of variability in nutrient content of animal manures, different crops have different nutrient requirements, and a strategy needs to be developed to best use the nutrients being purchased and produced on the farm.

The first step in nutrient management is testing. You need to be routinely soil and manure testing. You cannot develop a nutrient management plan without testing. Book values are not accurate due the high degree of variability in soils and manures. This is due to different farm histories, management programs, and feeding programs.

The nutrient value of poultry manure will depend on how the manure is stored and applied to the land. The poultry industry has done a poor job of educating the lawmakers and environmentalists on the characteristics of poultry manure. There is a false perception that poultry produces a manure that has a high potential for pollution compared to other animal species.

Current nutrient management legislation requires planning to be done on animal units (AU). One animal unit is defined as 1,000 pounds of body weight. Based on nutrient content of manure, the amount of manure produced, and storage and field application method used, poultry manure provides basically the same amount of nitrogen per AU as other farm animals.

The following table gives amount of manure produced by one AU of various farm animals and daily nitrogen production:

Animal	Lb./ Day	Tons/ Day	Nitrogen/ Ton	Nitrogen/ Day/ AU
Dairy Cow	82	0 04	10	0 41
Sow+Pigs	88	0 04	14	0 62
Chickens	32	0 02	40	0 64
Sheep	40	0 02	23	0 46

Because the nitrogen in animal manures is in different forms, the amount of nitrogen that volatilizes into the air is different and affects the amount of nitrogen in the soil and available to the crop. The

PFU Plans Big September

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farmers Union is planning a great September to spur action on many issues facing the family farmer in Pennsylvania.

The National Farmers Union President, Lee Swenson, will be in Pennsylvania September 4-9 to visit with farmers around the state. Key topics to be discussed will be dairy legislation, the overhauling of the Farmers Home Administration, disaster relief, federal wetlands legislation, and other major concerns facing family farmers and rural America.

In the past, the Farmers Union has been a supporter of the Farmers Home Administration, but today they believe the administrators have sought to wreck the program in recent years. "Farmers are having a tougher and tougher time getting operating loans, farm ownership loans, and guarantees from Farmers Home," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "The system needs major reforms, but the bulk of those reforms can be done administratively."

The dairy issues and dairy legislation which will be in the forefront of topics will be discussed. Updated information on our recent activities and support of House Bill 2837, introduced by Representative Stenholm, will be delineated.

Allen Deiter, President of Pennsylvania Farmers Union, said, "We need to get the two-tier, supply management program in place to assure the dairy farms in Pennsylvania can continue to operate." The House Bill 2837 is the best offer that advances the market price for dairy farmers.

The international trade agreements need to be closely monitored to prevent the loss of Section 22. This section protects beef and dairy producers from unlimited imports. Our farmers cannot easily compete with these imports and it would result in lower world market prices. Deiter said, "These imports would be in direct competition with our domestic products."

"The most positive promotion that Pennsylvania Farmers Union is doing to help educate consumers and farmers is to hold community meetings and hearings to explain what a fair share is for the farmer," said Sandra Reagle, executive director. "We are encouraging everyone in their community to attend these meetings across the state in September to find out what is occurring in rural America."

The current meetings to be held are:

Sept. 5, York County, 7:30 p.m., at the REA Building west of York. For information, call George Hoke (717) 225-4410.

Sept. 6, Southwestern Pa. Farmers Union, Shadyside Inn, Uniontown. For more information, call Irk McConnell (412) 845-8906, Merlin Gnegy (814) 445-4050, Adam Skokut (412) 872-6892, or Robert Junk (412) 438-5023.

Sept. 7, Jefferson County, 7:30 p.m. at the Roseville Grange. For more information, call Elfriede Shields (814) 856-2685.

Sept. 8, Western Pa. Farmers Union Picnic, 2 p.m., Mercer County 4-H Grounds. For more information, call Scott McNamara (814) 333-9161, Jack Rynd (814) 425-7046, Jack Philson (412) 475-2631, Terry Pattison (814) 438-3668, or Ed Laver (412) 253-2910.

Pork Info Conference Set

DES MOINES, Iowa — The pork industry's biannual information conference is scheduled Oct. 20-22 in St. Louis, Mo.

The conference, entitled "Strategies for Success . . . Conquering the Challenges," is designed for all pork producers, especially women, interested in learning more about industry challenges such as food safety, animal rights, and environmentalism.

The event, funded in part by checkoff dollars, will be sponsored by the National Pork Council Women (NPCW).

"This conference will provide producers an overall view of the issues facing the pork industry and an understanding of how these issues can affect how we run our pork operations in the future," said Lorraine Harness, a Missouri pork producer and NPCW president.

Among the scheduled speakers will be Michael Jackson, the founder/president of Agri Business Group, an international agriculture service business. Jackson will discuss crucial challenges facing agriculture and the pork industry as well as outline strategies for success.

Other conference highlights will include workshops on animal rights/welfare, increasing pork usage in the food service industry, promotion, education, and working with legislators.

Cost of the conference will be $69 prior to Sept. 20 and $89 after that date or on-site. The fee includes all programs, six meals, a riverboat cruise, materials, and a livestock tour for spouses. To register or receive more information, contact NPCW's Pat Rigby at (800) 456-7675.

Poultry Farmers

pounds of nitrogen produced per year per AU for various manures and method of incorporation are:

Incorp. Method	Dairy Cow	Sow+ Pigs	Chickens	Sheep
Within 48 Hrs.	98 55	146 00	146.00	109 50
Within 3-4 Days	91 25	135 05	131 40	102 20

When developing a nutrient management plan for your farm, you may need to look at developing new cropping practices. Planting cover crops, grasses requiring high levels of nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium, and double cropping are a few ways to utilize additional nutrients being produced by your poultry.

By educating crop farmers of the value of manure as a source of plant nutrients, we will help to improve the quality of our soils while protecting our water supplies.

WORK WATCH

The Work Watch Is Back!

In the mid-1980's we sold hundreds of work watches to hard-working individuals like yourself who needed an accurate, dependable timepiece They needed a watch that would withstand the dust, moisture, bumps, and temperatures encountered on the farm, in the orchard, and in the woods Many who bought the work watch told us it was the best watch they had ever owned Now, due to the past success and the present need, we are again offering the work watch through Lancaster Farming

Our work watch has all the features needed to endure the punishment you will put it through The WATER RESISTANT seal will protect your watch when you irrigate fields, fix broken water systems, get milk splashed on your arm while feeding calves, or walk the fence in the rain, to find out where your cattle are getting out Being SHOCK RESISTANT, your work watch will continue to work when it is slapped by a cow's tail, a falling board, or the belt shield that your arm slams against when your wrench slips off the bolt While your watch is scraped by branches, rubbed against walls, and knocked against machinery, the low profile, SCRATCH RESISTANT, glass crystal will resist the scratches and cracks that render watches unreadable Finally, the BATTERY POWERED QUARTZ movement of your work watch is accurate to within 2 minutes per year, and does not need to be wound, meaning that your watch will be on time, all the time, without any effort on your part

A final proof of the strength of this watch and of its suitability to your needs is the warranty. If your work watch stops running within FIVE YEARS of the date of purchase, the manufacturer will repair or replace your watch at no charge This is one of the longest warranties in the watch industry The manufacturer's confidence in this watch means that you can have confidence in its durability and can know that this is the only work watch you will need to buy for the next five years

Local Farmers Improve Water Quality

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Local farmers in Chester County are demonstrating their commitment to improving the quality of neighboring streams and rivers by installing a variety of farm practices aimed at the proper management of soil and soil nutrients.

The farmers are participants in Pennsylvania's Chesapeake Bay Program. The program, designed to reduce the amount of sediment and nutrient pollution entering local waterways that eventually empty into the Chesapeake Bay, is carried out locally by the Chester County Conservation District through an agreement with the State Conservation Commission.

Approximately $578,402 in cost share funding has been provided to Chester County farmers since 1985 through the efforts of the Chester County Conservation District, with $135,000 worth of best management practices being installed in 1990 by Chester County Chesapeake Bay farmers. A total of nearly $13 million has been earmarked for use by Pennsylvania farmers in 28 counties in the Susquehanna and Potomac drainage basins.

"I think the system is definitely going to pay off," said Terry Stauffer of Cochranville "but I couldn't have afforded it without the Bay Program." Stauffer's system allows him to clean out his barn and feedlot in to a concrete tank that can contain six months worth of manure.

After the crops (now planted in contour strips) are harvested and before the next ones are planted, the manure is spread on the fields in the amount required by the crops. "I don't have to haul manure every day like I used to, the fields are easier to work on the contour than they were when I farmed them up and down the slope, and the crops get the full benefit of the manure, which saves me fertilizer."

The State Conservation Commission, which administers the Chesapeake Bay Program, is housed in the Department of Environmental Resources and acts as an advisory committee to the department on a number of issues. The commission is comprised of farmer and public members who are appointed by the governor, and ex-officio members representing the Department of Agriculture and Penn State's College of Agriculture. The secretary of DER acts as the chairman of the commission.

Although the program's main emphasis is providing financial assistance to farmers for the installation of best management practices, the State Conservation Commission also authorizes funds for water quality monitoring efforts, technical assistance to landowners, local demonstration projects, and research in the area of nutrient management.

Both the Chester Conservation District and the farmers involved in the Chesapeake Bay Program agree that one of its most appealing aspects is the fact that the policies and procedures established by the State Conservation Commission provide the proper framework for technical and financial assistance to be delivered with ease and speed not usually found in other government programs.

"A lot of people get shook up when they think about dealing with the government, but I haven't had any problems with the Conservation District," said Stauffer. "They keep the best interest of the farmer in mind."

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

Facts & Opinions

"DUROCS - GROW FASTER ON LESS FEED"

The above motto has been in existence and has been repeated by producers, extension personnel, and Association-related employees thousands and thousands of times.

Since the beginning, the Duroc breed has been recognized by almost everyone as unquestionably the fastest growing hog on the face of the earth and one that possesses the genetic ability to convert feed stuffs into a saleable product in a highly efficient manner.

I find one of the most interesting concepts of "DUROCS - GROW FASTER ON LESS FEED" is that you can get punch in the areas of growth and efficiency for every genetic line that is available in our breed today. In reviewing and analyzing three genetic strains persent in our breed, it was evident that they possessed these powers even though they have been highly linebred for a number of generations.

Breeders have absent-mindedly tried to remove these genetic facts; but, try as they may, you can still count on a purebred Duroc to deliver the extra needed punch.

A review of the fall sales that I had the privilege to work is an excellent example of what I am talking about. I was able to visit with a number of commercial producers at these functions, with theconservations invariably turning to the fact that they used Duroc parentage for two main reasons: (1) they grow much faster than the norm; and (2) they consumed less feed in the process!

These producers were successful in their own right, have survived the rigors of life and less-than-desirable economic conditions, and intend to survive the prosper during the remainder of this decade and into the next century. They were also articulate and intelligent enough to know that they couldn't get enough of a good thing. They recognized what our breed has to offer and put it to use.

It's come to my attention this fall that producers will look at a set of figures, analyze them, and search out boars and gilts that excel in growth and efficiency.

You can read all the reports, data sheets, and professionally prepared papers you want to, but the fact of the matter is that commercial pork prodeucers respect the Duroc breed for what it has to offer and have done an excellent job capitalizing on it. They know that they'll get that extra punch when they use our genetics and they also have realized (and capitalized on) the fact that Durocs are big, high-performance hogs that continue to generate and produce their entire lives. Unfortunately, the competition cannot state claim to these facts!

Deere Creates Lawn, Grounds Care Division

MOLINE, Ill. — Deere & Company recently announced the creation of the Lawn and Grounds care division. The new division was formerly known as the consumer products group, and was part of the company's worldwide agricultural equipment and consumer products division.

The new division will be headed by Bernard L. Hardiek, senior vice president, who will also retain responsibility for the parts division, and Mark C. Rostvold, vice president, lawn and grounds care division.

"The creation of this new division reflects the expanding prospects and the past contributions of our former Consumer Products group," said Hardiek.

"Over the past 28 years, beginning in 1963 with our first lawn and garden tractor, John Deere has developed the industry's broadest line of lawn and grounds care equipment," Hardiek said. "We now manufacture for a variety of markets, including the homeowner, commercial, and golf and turf markets."

Hardiek also said the company's worldwide growth in these markets continues to match or exceed the company's objectives. "We now have over 3,000 lawn and grounds care dealers in North America and we market our products worldwide in a growing number of countries," he said.

"We believe that the formation of this new division will enhance our prospects for further expansion of product lines and continued growth of market shares," Hardiek said.

John Deere's lawn and grounds care division produces and markets a broad variety of equipment, including walk-behind mowers, riding mowers and lawn tractors for the homeowner; professional mowing equipment and compact utility tractors for the commercial operator; and an expanding variety of equipment for golf course and turf professionals.

The products of the lawn and grounds care division are manufactured at the division's primary facility in Horicon, Wis., also at newer facilities in Greenville, Tenn. and Augusta, Ga. The division also recently located a national marketing organization in Raleigh, NC.

Lab Names Leffler Radon Screening Dealer

RICHI AND (Lebanon Co.) — Radalytic Labs, Inc., a leading radon testing laboratory headquartered in Rock Hill, SC, has named Carlos R. Leffler, Inc., as the laboratory's authorized dealer for radon screening tests in Pennsylvania.

Scott Sweigart and Mike Gieniec of Carlos R. Leffler, Inc. recently completed Radalytic's required training and have been designated radon testing specialists.

Radon is a radioactive gas which occurs in nature. It is a product of the natural breakdown of uranium. Scientists estimate that 5,000 to 20,000 lung cancer deaths a year in the U.S. may be attributed to long-term exposure to Radon.

Sweigart said, "Radon, isn't new. It has always been a part of our environment, and it is relatively harmless in open air. However, once trapped inside a closed space such as a building, radon can accumulate. You cannot see it, smell it, or taste it. It is the accumulation of radon in modern structures that poses a potential health risk.

"Radon can move through small spaces in the soil and rock on which a house or building is built," Sweigart said. "It can seep into a structure through floors, cracks in concrete, floor drains, sumps, joints, and tiny cracks or pores in the walls.

"The dilemma is that right now, no one knows for certain which buildings and building sites have a problem, and which do not. Strangely enough, one structure may contain a high level of radon, when a structure just next door contains a low level," he said.

To be safe, all structures where people live or work should be tested.

Gieniec said, "Special equipment is needed to detect radon."

First, small charcoal canisters are exposed to the air in the structure for 48 hours, under controlled conditions. The charcoal absorbs a sample of the air in the test area.

After exposure, these canisters are sent to Radalytic Labs, Inc. for analysis. Sophisticated computer analysis determines the level of radon in the sample and a report is sent to the owner of the structure. If high levels of radon are found in a structure, corrective ventilation measures may be advised. Ventilation methods vary widely, depending on a building's style of construction.

SELLING TIMBER: KNOW WHAT YOU ARE DOING

Dr. Robert S. Hansen
Area Extension Forester
Penn State

At some time In the development of your woodlot, you will need to consider a commercial harvest. Timber harvesting is the principal way a landowner can control the composition and growth ot his or her woods.

Selling timber is also the principal method of generating income from a woodlot. Because there is generally a relatively large amount of money involved, the landowner should be aware of the many factors involved in timber harvesting.

Of utmost importance, the landowner should have an adequate contract that protects his interests, addresses the needs of the woodland, and considers the needs of the buyer to make a reasonable profit.

In our economic system the buyer tries to obtain timber at the lowest possible price while, at the same time, the seller tries to obtain the highest price possible for the same timber.

The largest problem that the landowner onen has is a lack of understanding about the value of the timber and about the acceptable methods of harvesting. When the landowner is unaware of these two concepts, he is at a definite disadvantage when selling timber and is unlikely to obtain the best price for that timber.

Before selling timber, the landowner should attempt to find as much information as possible about this process. Your county extension office can supply you with information such as "Pennsylvania Woodlands #5, Marketing Products from Your Woodland." Your county service or CFM forester can also be of great assistance in helping you.

A landowner should obtain the services of a professional forester when selling timber. A professional forester has a four year degree in forestry. A consulting forester will help you look after your interests in selling timber, preparing a contract, and administering the contract during its life.

When choosing a forester to assist you, the landowner should obtain references from past clients and talk to others that may know of the forester's work. The National Woodland Owners Association also has a program called Commended Consultant. This program recognizes superior seNices available to woodland owners.

Members of county woodland owner associations can also be of assistance when choosing a forester. A landowner should also check on the forester's membership in professional organizations such as the Society of American Foresters (SAF) and the Association of Consulting Foresters (ACF). Membership in these organizations does not insure that your forester will do a good job, but members of these organizations have agreed to follow a professional code of ethics.

Obtaining the services of a forester, however, does not release a landowner from knowing about his or her woodlot. Remember that you, as the woodlot owner, have the final say in how your woods will be managed. You have the final say!

Winner Named At Somerset Market Lamb Show

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — Popularity of the woolly ovine is increasing among youngsters in Somerset County, according to county fair officials who said that some 215 lambs were registered for the Market Lamb Show. By show time, however, the number was reduced to 160, but still took some six hours to be judged.

Heidi Svonavec, 11, from Rockwood, had the grand champion market lamb. It was a Suffolk weighing 120 pounds. This young gal was also the owner of the 1990 grand champion market lamb at the Somerset County Fiar and that was her "first time at bat."

"I was really surprised," says the sixth grader about her second successive victory. "He was really sick, (earlier), so I was just glad to be here!" Heidi says her excitement must have deeply occupied her subconscious mind because her mother later told her how she had talked about it during sleep.

According to Heidi, exercise is very important to prepare a market lamb for competition. She says her lamb was walked daily and fed from an elevated trough. Apparently, this method of stretching upward to eat formed good neck lines and strengthened its back legs. "Sometimes we would just chase it around the stall," she grins.

Her parents are David and Betty Lou Svonavec. Luke and Gabe are her younger brothers.

Erin Livengood, 10 of Boswell had the reserve champion 1991 Market Lamb. It, too, was a Suffolk weighing 120 pounds. She has an older sister and a younger brother. Their parents are David and Rose Livengood. Although her dad works in construction, the Livengoods reportedly live on a small farm which allows enough land for the children to raise their animals.

The grand champion lamb and owner, Heidi Svonavec, 11, at Somerset County Fair's Market Lamb Show.

The 1991 Market Lamb Reserve Champion with owner, Erin Livengood, 10, at the Somerset County Fair.

This year for the first time, an award was given for Home Grown Lamb. It was sponsored by the Somerset County Sheep and Wool Growers Association especially for the market lamb that was born and raised in the county.

Brock Hillegass of Fairhope was the recipient for his 110 pound Suffolk. The reserve champion in this category belonged to Michele Phillipps of Friedens.

Curtis Hughes, instructor of Vocational Agriculture at West Greene High School was the type judge. Judging showmanship was Mary Shick, Washington County Extension Livestock Agent. She impressed the kids with the importance of wearing sturdy protective footwear when working with and showing animals.

Drought-Str en Farm Ponds Susceptibl o Toxic Algae

Farm pc in the drought-stricken reg › of Pennsylvania may be susceptible to blooms of highly toxic blue-green algae, warns an expert in Penn State's College of Agriculture.

"Low rainfall and high summer temperatures can produce conditions that promote the growth of cyanobacteria," said Dr. James R. Pratt, professor of aquatic ecology in the college's School of Forest Resources.

"Cyanobacterial algae produces toxins that affect all organisms with central nervous systems, including fish, pets, wildlife, livestock, and even humans. Domestic livestock are particularly at risk, because they generally are watered from a single source," he said.

The toxins inhibit the nerves, causing animals to lose coordination and control of voluntary functions. Symptoms can include diarrhea and extreme sluggishness. The toxins can be fatal depending on how much is consumed.

"Farmers need to be aware that ponds with high livestock use and high phosphorus levels are ripe to produce toxic algal blooms," Pratt said. "Any scums or blooms on the pond should be treated with extreme caution, because poisonous conditions can develop quickly and without warning."

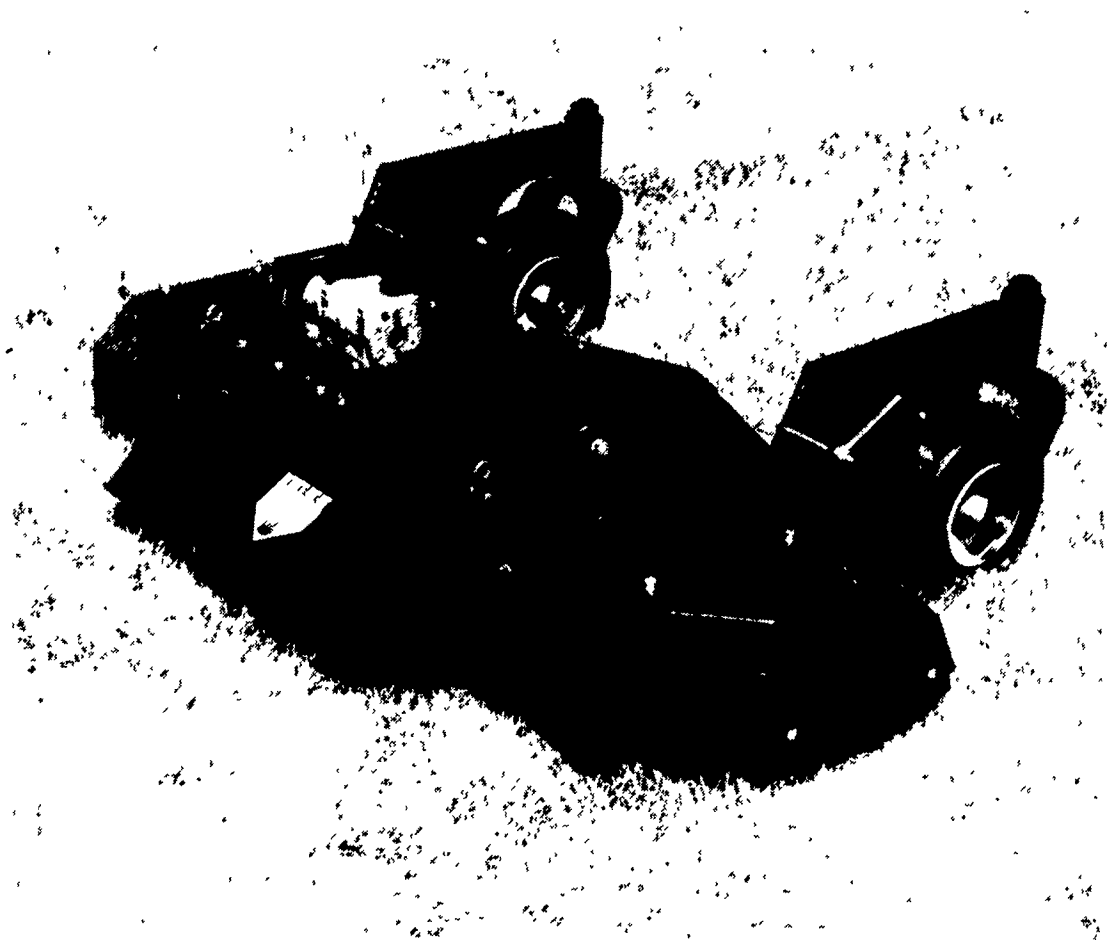
In the first week of August, several cows on a farm in New Ringgold fell ill after drinking water from a 25-year-old earthen farm pond used for stock watering and irrigation. The pond had been dredged the day before to remove sediment clogging the irrigation intake. The treating veterinarian, suspecting toxic algae were to blame, sent samples of pond scum to Pratt fo analysis.

"The samples were dominated by blue-green cyanobacteria algae," Pratt said. "This pond contamination started within a day after dredging, which indicates just how quickly this blue-green algae can turn a pond into poison."

Toxin-producing cyanobacteria are commonly found in fresh water throughout the growing season, but usually are held in check by competition with other algae. Dry weather conditions can increase the amount of phosphorus in farm ponds, while decreasing the amount of nitrogen available. Because cyanobacteria algae can draw nitrogen from the air, this nutrient imbalance gives it a competitive advantage over algae that feed on nitrogen in the pond itself.

If a pond suddenly undergoes blue-green algal bloom, farmers have several options to safeguard their livestock. "The simplest action would be to limit livestock access to the contaminated water," Pratt said. "Other options include nutrient manipulation, which limits the amount of food the algae has, and herbicide treatment."

If you suspect your pond may be contaminated, contact Pratt at (814) 865-6942 for more information.



GIBSON CITY, Ill. — M & W Gear Company introduces a new rear discharge cutting deck for selected models of Lawn Clipper zero turning radius mowers. The low-profile 11-gauge deck uses three high-lift blades to lift grass, cut it cleanly, and direct clippings to the rear. The rear discharge allows cutting up to obstacles to the right or left of the deck while clippings are deposited under the mower. Blades are driven by a single belt. Adjustable gauge wheels with pneumatic 11x4.00-5 tires maintain cutting height. The new deck is available on Lawn Clipper Model LC1250, LC1800 and LC1890 mowers. For more information, contact M & W Gear Company, 1020 South Sangamon Avenue, Gibson City, IL 60936.

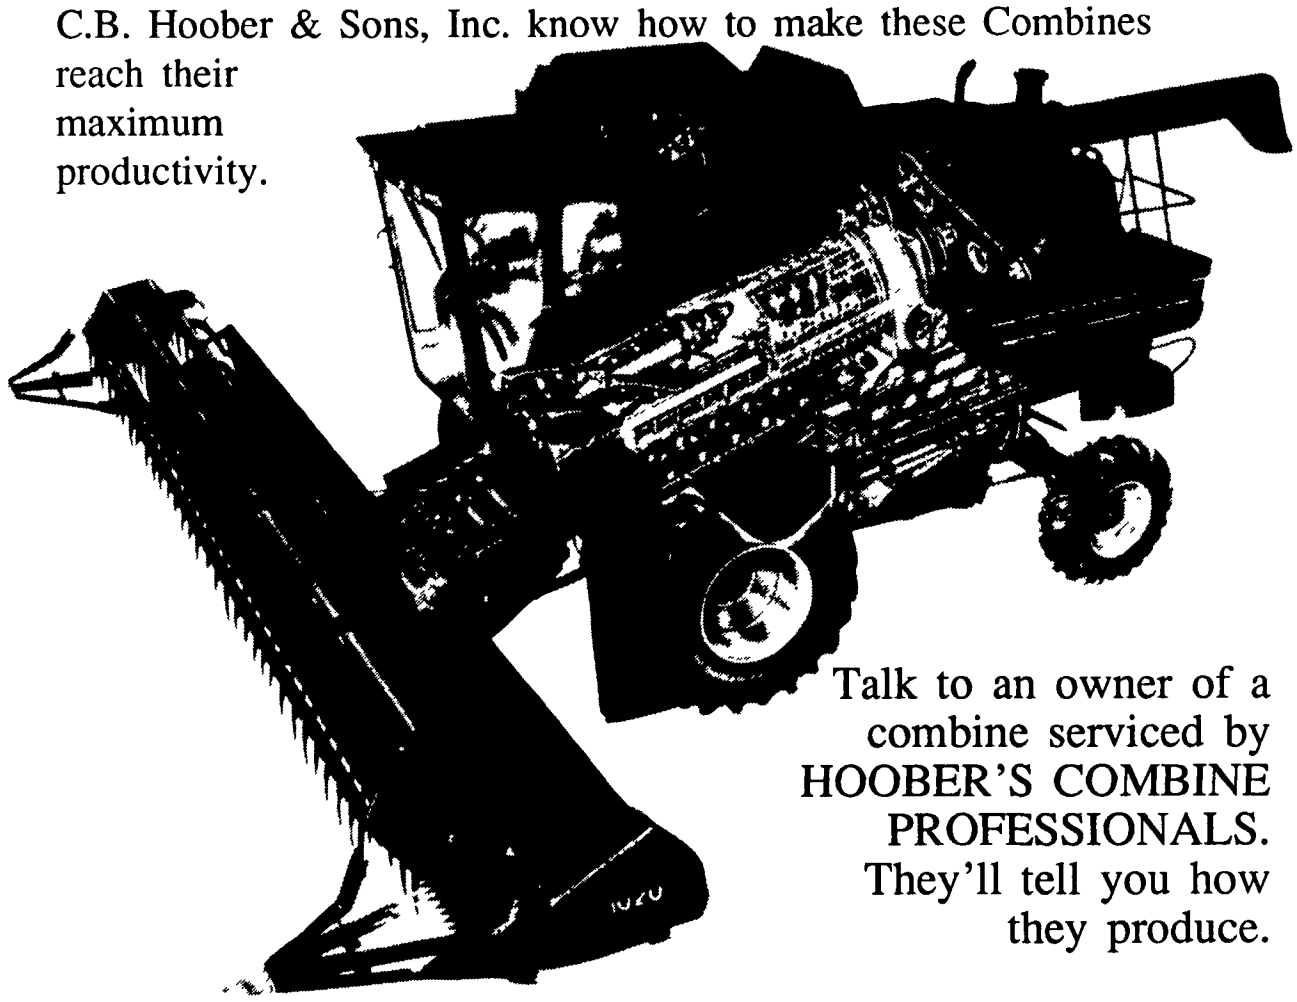
HOOBER PEOPLE MAKE AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES PRODUCE FOR YOU!

By servicing over 200 Axial-Flow Combines, The people at C.B. Hoober & Sons, Inc. know how to make these Combines reach their maximum productivity.



Talk to an owner of a combine serviced by HOOBER'S COMBINE PROFESSIONALS. They'll tell you how they produce.

CAN YOU AFFORD NOT TO OWN A USED AXIAL-FLOW FROM HOOBER?

The Reason Axial-Flow Combines Are More Productive - THE ROTOR!

The Single Rotor design is SIMPLE!

Only a single rotor to thresh and separate. Eliminates the straw-walker assemblies common to conventional combines. Less moving parts means less maintenance, less downtime.

The Single Rotor Design is HIGHER QUALITY GRAIN

Multiple threshing action of axial-flow reduces kernal damage and holds elevator dockage to a minimum.

The Single Rotor Design is MORE PRODUCTIVE!

When your crops are ripe and ready to harvest, Axial-Flow allows you to move faster than with a conventional combine. The rotor's large throat means no bottle-necks up front. You'll be able to harvest at top speed for maximum productivity, even on side-hills.

2. Hoober's professional combine mechanics drive fully equipped combine service trucks, stocked with commonly used wearing parts. When called to service or repair an axial-flow combine, they carry with them the tools and equipment to do the job and get you back to the field fast.
3. Hoober's Parts Department has the largest combine parts inventory in the East. Daily pick-ups at the Case IH Parts depot help to provide fast emergency parts availability. Hoober's expert combine PARTS service provides you minimum downtime and maximum productivity.

FREE YOURSELF FROM SPREADER CHAINS AND SAVE MONEY

The proven Hydra-Spread design can free you from the grief and maintenance of spreader apron chains for good!

This low maintenance spreader features solid poly boards both on the sides and the floor for slippery, no-stick performance. Hydraulic push power replaces the extensive mechanism needed in ordinary spreaders.'

Why pay more for yesterday's ideas and designs? The design of tomorrow is PRICED RIGHT and will be on the job for years. We deliver to your farm.

MAXIMIZER™ COMBINES DELIVER ON THEIR PROMISE. EVEN WHEN CONDITIONS AREN'T PROMISING

"Bigger capacity Cleaner grain and more of it." That's what new-technology Maximizer combines promise And they deliver in all harvest conditions—good, bad and indifferent.

Threshing capacity is thorough and gentle with a larger slower-speed cylinder and large concave area. Samples are cleaner, thanks to the Quadra-Flo™ system with its precleaner, four high velocity fans, chaffer and sieve.

Stop in. You'll see that the total feature combination, along with traditional John Deere reliability and dealer service, gives you more reason than ever to go Maximizer.

That's a promise.

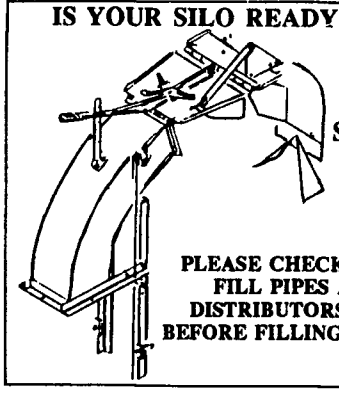
S & S SILO SERVICE

ATTENTION FARMERS
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete
STRONGER AND WILL OUT LAST PLASTER

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH CORN SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

Dairy Tips By Dr. Randy Lyle, Ph.D.

Purina Mills Dairy Consultant

IT'S MIDNIGHT. DO YOU KNOW WHERE YOUR COWS ARE?

Most likely, your cows have located, and are lounging, in the coolest spot within the confines of your dairy farm. If they could speak English, they would tell us they are trying to lose the heat they have gained during the day. Most of them would also tell us that they would spend more time eating at night, if they had not gained so much heat during the daylight hours. For most cows, restoring normal body temperatures takes priority over eating and making milk. Cows confined to barns during the night will not cool off, unless air movement is forced and fully adequate.

What can be done to encourage normal intakes and milk yields this summer?

1. Provide shade over feed bunks, waterers, and lounging areas. A white metal roof works best, however, shade cloth can also stop up to 80% of solar radiation. Barn roofs should be high, with eaves at least 12 feet high.

2. Install fans. Size of area to be cooled and height of roof is important. Be sure to mount fans high and out of reach. A .5 HP, 36" fan rated 11,000 CFM will blow 30 ft. A 1.0 HP, 48" fan rated 21,000 CFM will blow 50 ft. Install fans to blow WITH the direction of prevailing winds. Install fans on existing poles, rather than hanging from high rafters. Tilt fans downward to blow on cows.

3. Provide plenty of access to cool, clean water. Don't let feed and algae accumulate in water troughs. Water intakes should be twice as much at 80 degrees, compared with 40 degrees. Spray cows. Sprinkler systems can be installed inexpensively. Overhead PVC piping and inverted in-ground sprinkler heads work well. Water droplets must be directed away from bedding areas. Droplets must be large enough to penetrate through the hair coat, to the skin. The combination of fans and sprinklers works very well to cool cows.

In University studies, cows that were cooled produced up to 6 lbs. more milk per day than non-cooled cows. Economics favor management of heat stress, rather than "letting it pass".
